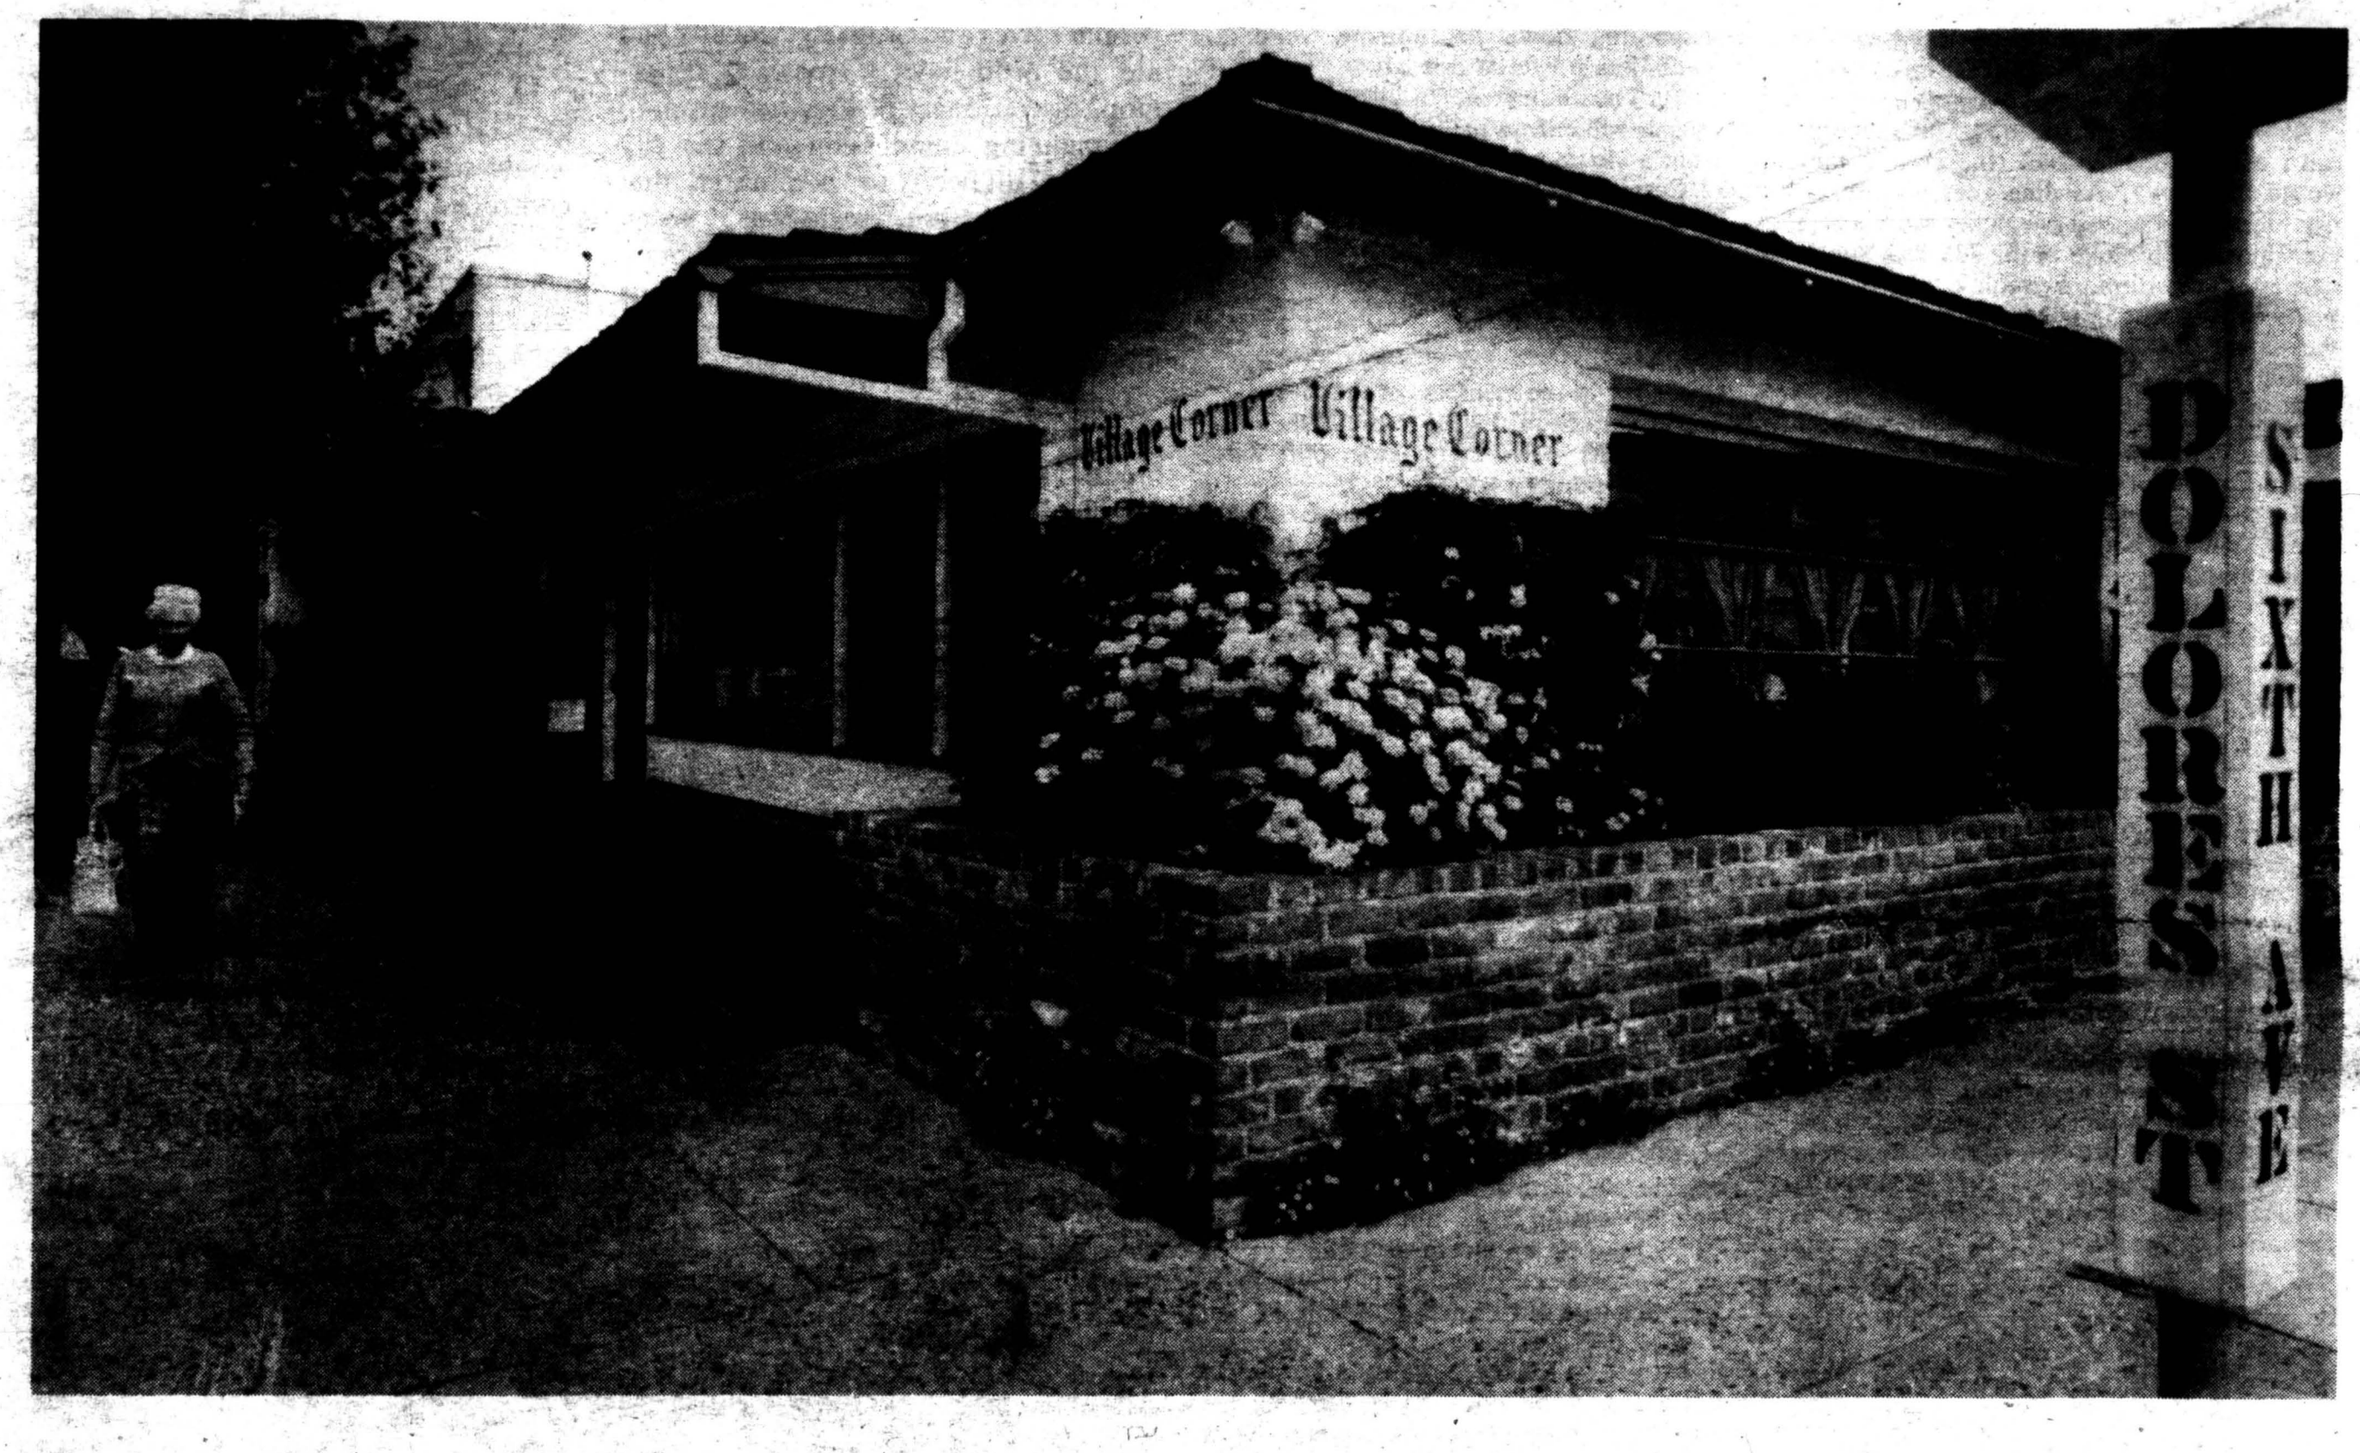
OUR 73RD YEAR, NO. 21

May 28, 1987



UNDER AN urgency ordinance before the Carmel City Council at its June 2 meeting, there would be no further review or applications accepted for at least 45 days regarding second stories in the commercial district. Both council members and residents have expressed fear that the skyline of the downtown shopping area is in danger of vanishing unless skyward building is curtailed. There are plans currently underway to construct second-story apartments adjacent to the Village Corner restaurant (above), at the corner of Dolores and Sixth. (Holly McFarland photo.)

Second story controversy goes to city council

By DAVID LELAND

THE SKYLINE in the central business district will remain unaltered — for a while — if the Carmel City Council adopts an urgency ordinance banning second stories at its June meeting.

At last month's gathering, the council asked the Carmel Planning Commission to form a resolution suspending any review or issuance of building permits for the central commercial zone on Ocean Avenue until a definite policy could be set.

The ordinance coming before the council calls for a maximum of 45 days of suspended activity.

The council will meet at 4 p.m. Tuesday, June 2 in the Carmel Woman's Club at Ninth Avenue and San Carlos Street.

The moratorium comes in response to councilmembers' and residents' fears that the appearance of downtown Carmel is in danger of vanishing.

According to the city planning staff there have been three applications for second-story additions to existing single-story buildings within the central business in the past 12 months.

At its May meeting, the city council turned down an appeal by Ted and Bob Leidig of a planning commission decision denying them increased space for construction of second-story apartments over the Dansk building at Ocean Avenue and San Carlos Street.

At that time, Councilwoman Elinor Laiolo called for a moratorim on second stories, which she said she hoped would stop any further applications.

During the month and a half the urgency ordinance would be in effect, the planning commission would review and recommend changes to existing ordinances regarding second-story construction.

Only after those recommendations are given would any specific plans be reviewed, according to the city planning staff.

ALSO AT next week's meeting, the council will hear an ordinance amending the specific plan for the senior housing project.

Initially, when plans where submitted to the council in 1985, the specific plan for the senior housing project, to be located at Dolores Street and Fifth Avenue, called for 15 housing units and nine parking stalls.

At that time, the Monterey County Housing Authority was in charge of building the project.

But last summer, the Carmel Foundation took over responsibility for designing the low-income project to be built on the city-owned lot. Plans now call for 36 parking spaces in an underground garage with 24 apartments for seniors.

Now, after passing the general plan test and state guidelines, it appears the change in the specific plan may be one of the last stumbling blocks before the foundation can procede with its plans.

The senior housing project was one of several municipal projects released from limbo by the water ordinance adopted at a March 13 meeting by the city council.

Before that the senior housing had been put on hold due to the city's water woes.

Another major issue before the council will be a report from the planning commission with its recommendations on whether a multi-level parking garage at Sunset Center is in conformance with the general plan.

There are several elements of the general plan that need to be addressed, according to the city planning staff. These include: the socio-cultural and public facilities, land use, significant buildings, circulation and noise elements.

At a special council meeting earlier this month, the council designed an ordinance setting guidelines for accepting bids from architects for the garage.

The planning commission will also give the council its report on the design, financing, construction, maintenance and operation of the garage at the meeting.

Perhaps the most immediate area of the general plan needing to be addressed regarding the proposed garage are the economic rammifications included in the socio-cultural section of the plan.

This part of the plan requires the city to consider the economics and efficiency of proposed new facilities.

It is unclear if a multi-level garage would be able to support itself in Carmel. It remains to be seen how much economic responsibility the city would be required to take on to maintain the parking lot if the party that leases it is not successful.

The council has made it clear that no parking facilities will be constructed in that area until there has been sufficient public input.

A civic necessity

Dear Editor:

Mrs. Helen Lambert's letter in your May 14 issue cites an article I wrote as a putative agrument against expanding the theater at Sunset Center.

Nothing could be further from my view of the matter. I am firmly convinced that a larger facility is the only way that we can continue the cultural traditions of this area.

As Mrs. Lambert states, "Many people can't afford to attend all (the events) they would like now." As time goes on and artists' fees rise, the cost per ticket will become even more prohibitive in the 733-seat Sunset Center Auditorium. Economic reality will force either a rise in ticket cost or a drop in the stature of the performers who can be afforded.

As a resident of the immediate area of Sunset Center, I am not concerned about increased traffic. The present flow on concert nights is easily bearable, and could be increased without congestion. It's important to realize that concerts ordinarily take place at night, not during the high-demand daytime hours.

The proposed parking garage is not strictly part of the Sunset Center Theater project, I understand; however, the idea of a sunken garage certainly has nothing to do with concerns about rooflines, and the concept of topping the facility with plantings is an obvious improvement over the present parking lot, which resembles a meteor crater. Questions of crime and safety do sound strange coming from a resident of a village which prides itself on unlit streets that allow no level sidewalk areas.

Mrs. Lambert's suggestion of polling all peninsula residents about their reaction to a larger Sunset Theater has been anticipated in the published feasibility study. Reactions from all segments of the community throughout the area were overwhelmingly affirmative and positive.

I don't mean to denigrate anyone's real concerns about any large-scale project in Carmel. Certainly, anyone knowledgeable about past history has every reason to be suspicious of changes and to examine every new plan very, very carefully. However, in this case we are dealing with something that goes beyond civic improvement to become a civic necessity.

Carmel's schoolchildren have no way of learning stagecraft; Carmel's citizens cannot see any shows that require scenery; Carmel's lovers of dance cannot appreciate the art of larger companies on the cramped stage; Carmel's position as a cultural leader in the area is threatened by economic reality.

Carmel's rich cultural past has been one of the factors that has defined it as a special place. That heritage should be maintained, and a more functional Sunset Center that meets future needs is one way of ensuring the richness of our lives here.

Victim of Carmel

Dear Editor:

Following is a little ode I wrote this morning. I am a professional woman, employed on the peninsula; I live on upper Junipero Street in Carmel.

I live in the city. From 7:30 in the morning until almost midnight and later on weekends, the roar and racket of traffic outside my window is a relentless neighbor. Thirty feet away is a stop sign which cars careening down the hill completely ignore.

The filthy odor of badly maintained vehicles rises on warm air to permeate the air I breathe on cold mornings I awake to a sinister visitor — carbon monoxide in the auto exhaust is held in place by the cold, heavy air. My companion until afternoon is a bad headache from carbon monoxide poisoning.

When I become frustrated with the stress of noise and bad smells, I attempt to go for a walk outdoors. Every two minutes I must leap from the roadway to avoid being hit by a car speeding down the narrow, winding, sidewalk-less streets of this city.

I return home shaken, frazzled, and angry. No peace will enfold me there.

I am a victim of the city. What city, you ask? Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Airship's demise

Dear Editor:

No doubt I am only one of many to applaud a local real estate firm's "Carmel Legends," but considering the facts surrounding the airship (i.e. not a "dirigible") U.S.S. Macon, a structural failure in the stern precipitated its demise on Feb. 12, 1935.

Turning to avoid a squall, the cover of canvas tore off the upper rear fin, and two helium cells deflated, jarring the control from the airship pilot's hands, sinking the stern, the engines propelling the great craft upward through the clouds to some 4,600 feet, where airspeed was finally decreased, ballast and aft fuel tanks were dropped, an attempt to launch the four fighter landplanes from the underdeck failed, and the ship began a rapid decent at speeds up to 600 feet per minute.

When the stern finally hit the water, the control car on the undercarriage was still 250 feet in the air. The bow disappeared under the choppy seas at 6:20 p.m., ending some 70 minutes of drama, according to Point Sur Lighthouse keepers Thomas Henderson and Henry R. Miller, who provided the only outside eyewitness testimony during the Court-of-Inquiry.

For further information, I invite the realtor to join me or any of the dozen newly graduated Point Sur Docents of the Big Sur Historical Society on a public tour of the landmark light station-on-the-rock, beginning a regular weekend schedule very soon. (To be announced.)

Valley gridlock

Dear Editor:

Could it be that you really can't stop overdevelopment? I am almost inclined to believe so when I learn that a 100-room hotel is going to open in June at Carmel Valley Ranch in spite of the fact that its main service road is at level "F," i.e. gridlock.

Traffic on Carmel Hill is out of control as anybody knows who has driven it. Traffic at the mouth of the valley on Carmel Valley Road is at level "F."

I sat in Judge (Richard) Silver's chambers not so long ago and heard him talk about activating "triggering mechanisms" in the new Carmel Valley Land Use Plan that would place projects such as this hotel on hold until roads are built or expanded to bring the level of service to level "C." However, after contacting (5th District) Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman's office I find out that the new land use plan for Carmel Valley does not apply in this case because the use permit was issued years ago.

When traffic is at gridlock at the primary entrance to Carmel Valley and will remain so for at least five more years until the Hatton Canyon Freeway is constructed, I say action must be taken now in the form of an emergency ordinance that would place a hold on new projects until the level of service on Highway 1 and Carmel Valley Road at the mouth of the valley is reduced to levels called for in the new Carmel Valley Land Use Plan. When that happens let the new hotel open.

The well-being of people living in Carmel Valley, Carmel Highlands and Big Sur must be addressed first, not tourists who wish to stay at a luxury hotel at Carmel Valley Ranch.

MAYOR'S REPORT

By Clint Eastwood

A change is needed

PEOPLE TRY to tell us the Carmel General Plan was not an issue in the election...that is not quite true. As I recall, almost all the candidates discussed this document at great length.

What's wrong with the present general plan? It finds all kinds of things wrong within the city and its answer to every one of them is stricter regimentation of people's lives and property. Equally bad are the ordinances it spawned. Enormous discretionary powers were given to the planning commission and the city staff so difficult to administer that delays, frustration, escalation of costs, and a kind of plea bargaining to obtain permits became routine. Ask anyone who tried to build a house or start a new business.

Under the present general plan, zone lines are drawn in the middle of the blocks between Ocean and Seventh avenues with no demonstration of public benefit and in the face of a protest petition by distinguished Carmelites with an average residency of 35 years. This plan became the means of justifying the assessment of six in-lieu parking spaces on the former Sprouse-Reitz property when it was divided into two stores without any increase in parking demand.

There are other examples of unjust and punitive actions in both residential and commercial districts. The present plan fails to address the need for new water supplies for the city's unfair water allocation. It talks about legalizing second kitchens and then imposes such privacy-invading conditions that few owners would dare come forth.

The distressing part is that we are operating under this plan and its enabling ordinances until they are changed, which is why we need to get on with the process.

Even if every recommendation of the General Plan Committee is adopted, we would still have one of the most rigidly controlled cities around. During recent public meetings there has been a vast amount of public comment on the suggested revisions, in fact, far more than took place when the 1984 plan was adopted.

The planning commission and city council will have the final say and the groundwork will be laid for a more fundamental reworking of the general plan in the future.

Right now we have to correct the truly bad features of the existing plan and ordinances so we can move ahead on such pressing matters as legalization of second kitchens, policies for the R-4 district, the question of second stories downtown, the pursuit of more and better quality water, the parking problems, and a host of other matters.

Roberts resigns from planning commission

By NANCY HILLS

ON THE eve of his first year as a Carmel Planning Commissioner, Bruce Roberts turned in his resignation May 26.

The reason is a happy rather than sad one. A job promotion has changed his schedule, taking up the Wednesdays he had always reserved for commission meetings.

A replacement will be considered at the July city council meeting.

Roberts, a member of the Monterey Police Department, has been promoted from patrolman to detective, a position with a lot of interesting moments, but variable hours.

"My time is no longer my own," Roberts explained.

Roberts has missed several meetings in the last two months and most of the general plan sessions.

He was one of Mayor Clint Eastwood's first appointments after the city election last year, nominated to one of two commissioner's expired terms.

During his term as a commissioner, Roberts was known for his outspoken opinions, both for and against issues.

He objected to more second stories downtown, coining the phrase "concrete canyons"; supported the expansion of the Carmel Presbyterian Church as a community-oriented activity; and complained about what he considered pickiness in judging business signs.

He also filed an appeal of the commission's decision to allow a gift shop to occupy the former Studio Theater space, but withdrew it when he found little public support for the cause.

Working on the commission, Roberts said, "was pretty much what I expected."

"It was interesting. I personally was getting satisfaction out of it and felt my views were ones that needed to be expressed around the city," he said. "I'm interested in people. Government needs somebody to concern themselves with real people. I think sometimes people in government forget their decisions affect individuals."

The general plan, Roberts believes needs work — work that a consultant needs to do.

"There's so much information to coordinate. The staff doesn't have the time, a consultant would be more objective and the way the process is going, it (the revisions) will be dragged out until it is outdated again," he observed.

With all the public input, work done by the review committee, and the technical information, only a consultant has the time and expertise to put it into a comprehensive package, he said.

Roberts was an unsuccessful candidate for city council in 1984 and filed for the mayor's race last year. He withdrew his application when Eastwood entered the race and worked on that campaign.

'I'm interested in people. Government needs somebody to concern themselves with real people,' says Bruce Roberts. 'I think sometimes people in government forget their decisions affect individuals.'

The Carmel Pine Cone was unable to reach Eastwood for comment before press time.

General plan review continues to generate controversy

By NANCY HILLS

POLICIES AND public input remain a focus of controversy while the Carmel General Plan review continues on and on.

The May 20 planning commission general plan "workshop" evoked grumbles from audience members, who were not allowed to speak, while the General Plan Review Committee was given microphones to explain their changes.

Representatives of the Carmel Residents Association plan on submitting a letter in protest of what some consider an illegal procedure.

At the meeting the commission decided to put off discussion of major land use policy issues until its next general plan meeting, scheduled for 3 p.m., Wednesday, June 3 in Carmel City Council Chambers.

Those issues will probably be drawn from the list of Issues of Local Significance in the Land Use Element. If the commission has time, it will begin to consider the changes in the objectives, goals and policy section of the element.

Planning Director Diane White prepared a document for the commission, organizing summaries of public comment received during the hearing conducted in March and April. Using that text, the commisson reviewed the changes page by page and decided to delay the major issues and policies until the June 3 meeting.

Along with some of the comments from White's summary, the primary Issues of Local Significance and the proposed changes read (stating the current plan's text first):

• Maintaining Carmel's "predominantly residential village character."

The review committee left this issue intact but opponents to the changes have argued that the revisions jeopordize that mandate.

• "Encouraging land uses which provide goods and services for local residents."

Again, the review committee left this issue as is in the plan.

Opponents state that deletion of certain controls, such as limiting the number and type of businesses in town, dilutes the city's powers to "encourage" such land uses.

The committee has answered those charges by stating, with review committee member and commissioner Olof Dahlstrand as spokesman, that limiting the number and type of businesses is illegal and would lead to a "black market" of those commercial enterprises.

The Carmel Pine Cone learned through calls to Santa Barbara and Berkeley, two cities often mentioned as enforcing those types of restrictions, that Berkeley has had limitation of numbers of certain businesses in specific zones for four years.

Santa Barbara controls its business activities through zoning. The planning department in Berkeley said that its law has never been challenged in court.

• "Managing the commercial areas and tourist-related businesses and activities in Carmel in a manner that is economically sound for the community and not detrimental to Carmel's residential character."

Unchanged by the review committee, though how to achieve these goals has been a subject of general debate.

• "Directing Carmel's commercial development by evaluating the appropriate mix of busnesses in the downtown business district."

The review committee has suggested changing that to read: "Encouraging a mix of businesses in the downtown business district."

Public comment included objections to the word changes, saying the new phrase is a "meaningless statement because it is not tied to any definitiveness."

• "Evaluating what land use patterns have contributed to a change in the character of Ocean Avenue in Carmel, and directing future changes in a manner consistent with community goals."

The review committee has proposed deleting this issue entirely, a major point of dispute between the public and the review committee.

The review committee has also eliminated specific policies regarding Ocean Avenue that set it aside as a special zone.

Ocean Avenue was discussed May 20 by the commission.

Dahlstrand reiterated the committee's viewpoint that Ocean Avenue should be treated the same as the rest of the central commercial district. Requiring all businesses applying for a business permit on Ocean Avenue to be reviewed by the planning commission is an "unnecessary complication," he said.

Planning Commissioner Fred Keeble agreed with Dahlstrand, stating that to "set it apart develops a tourist strip" and most of the commissioners present concurred with that evaluation.

Though all the applications must be reviewed by the planning commission, all commercial uses in the CC district are allowed on Ocean Avenue.

Howard Nieman Jr., a Carmel resident who attended the meeting, said later that the commission is in error in thinking that the special zone is one that restricts tourist businesses to the main street. They can be located in any part of the CC district.

Nieman feels, as did other members of the audience, that the provision simply provides extra protection for the quality of businesses on Carmel's main boulevard.

• "Limiting new businesses that consume excessive amounts of water."

The review committee suggested changing this issue to: "Limiting land uses that consume excessive amounts water, but with the understanding that the severity of water shortages will vary from year to year."

There was little public comment on this point.

• "Providing land use policies to ensure implementation of the policies in the other general plan elements and the Local Coastal Plan. The key land use issue is how to achieve a proper mixture of commercial uses and visitor-related activities that is also compatible with the city's economic goals and residential character."

The committee has suggested eliminating the last sentence beginning with "The key land use issue..."

No public comment was listed for this change.

Public comments also addressed issues not included in the current revised general plan.

Dale Hekhuis, an attendee at the public hearings, suggested that "intensification" of the business district such as second stories, larger businesses, more businesses per square feet and like future concerns be included in the plan.

Intensification could have a real impact on the community so that the basic goal of the community could not be achieved, Hekhuis said.

Deletion of design review within the residential district is another important policy that will be discussed June 3.

Included in White's report, and to be reviewed by the commissioners, is a revised Issues of Local Significance list submitted by Nieman in a letter March 11. Nieman's list states: "The basic priciples central to the preservation of the residential character would be as follows:

• "Restrict visitor-oriented commercial activities to the central or service commercial districts.

• "Minimize, and eliminate where possible, the negative impacts (including noise, parking and traffic) of the commercial district on the residential neighborhoods.

• "Preserve residentially-oriented businesses which serve the basic needs of Carmel residents.

• "Preserve the scale and unique design of existing structures within the commercial and residential districts.

• "Encourage new residential development only when consistent with existing community standards, and continue to encourage a diversity of architectural design.

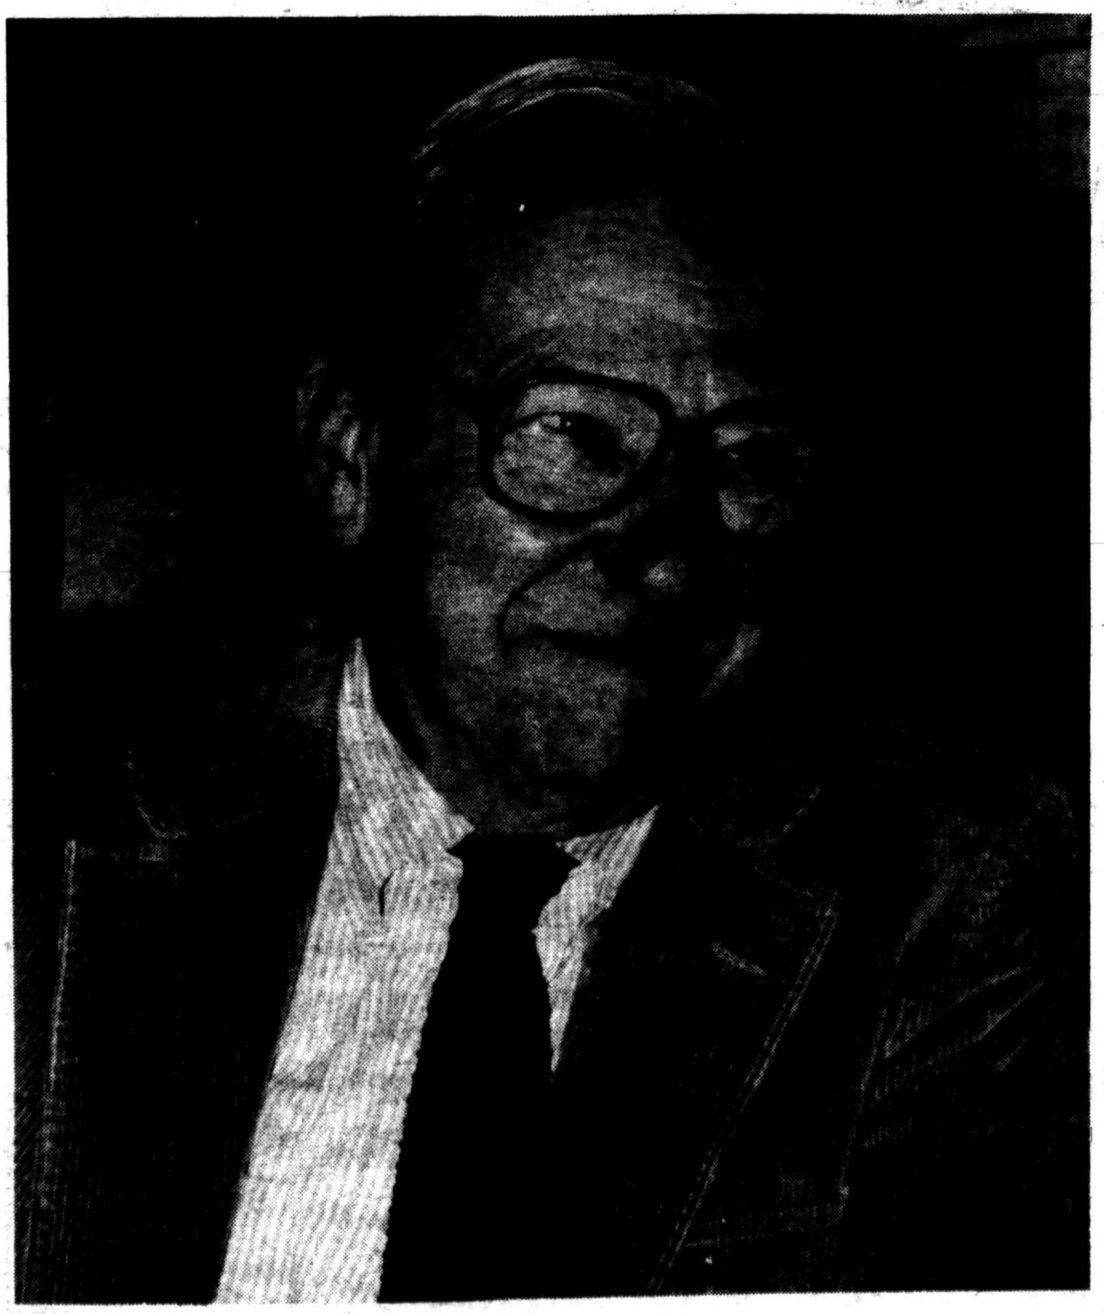
• "Maintain the urban forest, open space, recreational parks, natural vegetation and the village characteristics of the community.

• "Resolve conflicts between the residential and commercial interests in favor of the residential needs of the community in a manner of consist with public policy.

• "Maintain the existing lifestyle desired by Carmel residents.

• "Recognize that Carmel should not change merely because of demands to commercially capitalize on the uniqueness of the city, and should not allow our limited resources to be overused.

• "Recognize that the role of city government is to represent the broad interests of Carmel residents and voters."



PLANNING COMMISSIONER and General Plan Review Committee Member Olof Dahlstrand represented the committee's proposed changes during the May 20 planning commission meeting. Dahlstrand was the lead committee member in drafting the Land Use Element revisions.

Fire districts reach agreement with state and county agencies

By DAVID LELAND

TWO FIRE stations in the unincorporated area of Carmel reached an agreement this week with state and county agencies which calls for continued structural protection.

The contract, approved by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors Tuesday, calls for a 2 percent increase over 1985-86 fees billed by the state with a maximum of $873,761.

Fire stations affected by the contract include the Rio Road Station and the Carmel Hill Station. Also included in the agreement is a fire station in the unincorportated area of King City.

During the year the state bills fire stations for items such as manpower, buildings, apparatus and volunteer supervisors.

The agreement reached this week calls for the Carmel Hill Station to pay $97,481, while the Rio Road Station will pay $767,810.

The Carmel Hill Station has a lower billing because the state owns that firehouse.

The agreement was reached just in the nick of time and covers the year ending June 30, 1986, according to county public works supervisor Don Wilson.

"It's normally late," he said. "But not this late."

Wilson said the state usually begins billing in late fall, but this year there was some misunderstanding regarding the status of a Pebble Beach fire station.

"Pebble Beach got overcharged and we got undercharged," he said. "Which we thought was great."

Now, he said, this situation has been resolved.

On April 9, fire chiefs agreed to increase Rio Road's augmentation funds from $40,000 to $115,000 to pay back the undercharges, but the state wants an additional $15,000.

The fire chiefs will meet again on May 27 to discuss that increase. If the funds are raised to $130,000 that would be sufficient to carry the station through the 1988-89 fiscal year, Wilson said.

In order to continue current levels of fire service past the year 1990, advisory committees to Carmel Hill and Rio Road are recommending the issue be placed before the voters for increased spending.

County planning process to undergo streamlining

By DAVID LELAND

A SMALL group of county workers pushed forward this week, finding that it's easier to talk about "streamlining" than to actually pull it off.

At hand is a $22,000 study commissioned by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors earlier this year in an attempt to simplify the county's building permit process.

About halfway through the six-month study, however, the team's leader has found that state laws are designed to keep the building process at a slow, controllable pace.

"There's public participation at all levels," said Tom Kenan, a former county administrator who is leading the three-man committee. "To achieve that takes time."

Also tackling the complex problem are Lee Williams and Jim Cook, both administrative analysts with the county.

Currently, Kenan's office in the county building is cluttered with varying laws and ordinances governing permit issuance.

Members of the panel are attempting to make themselves knowledgeable of the law before making recommendations to the board late this summer.

"When we make suggestions, hopefully they will be with the laws and regulations that apply," said Kenan, who in the past two years has completed efficiency studies for the county's welfare and parks departments.

At issue is the large amount of red tape required to build something as seemingly simple as a deck or fence. Many times applicants are shuffled from one county office to the other, these can even be located in different parts of the peninsula.

"If we achieve nothing else this year than more efficient, direct services in the permit process...we will have earned the gratitude of the public," said chairwoman, 5th District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman, when the board commissioned the study.

There had been a similar study conducted three years ago which effected some changes to the system, but apparently those were lacking.

Kenan and his team initially approached the project systematically, beginning with all members of the board of supervisors.

There, they solicited problems members saw with the exisiting permit process and how those snags might be alleviated.

AFTER TALKING to the board, the advisory group took an entirely different stance.

"It appeared to us that we would be well advised if we looked at the other side of the permit process," Kenan said.

With that in mind, the task force talked to attorneys, architects, contractors, developers and land use consultants in an attempt to figure out their views.

While the forementioned group were familiar with the board and permit process having run up against it numerous times, Kenan's team also solicited feedback from people who had been subjected to the process only once.

"Once the word was out, we had a record number of calls," Kenan said. "They suggessted other people and asked for an opportunity to express their views."

More than 100 people were eventually interviewed by both the three-man panel and separately, Kenan said. He added that all those would remain anonymous.

"We wanted to encourage candor on the part of the individual," Kenan said.

Next, Kenan's committee met with the department heads of both the planning and building inspection departments to discuss their input.

The team also met with about half of the staff from each of those divisions plus visited the California Coastal Commission.

After interviewing, the team visited six counties and three cities looking for methods they may have used to simplify the building permit process.

The committee then interviewed all of the Monterey County Planning Commissioners.

Now comes the sorting out of the information they have gathered. It's not an easy task, but Kenan said it must be done in order to find a solution.

He said nothing jumped out of the interviews which suggested a practical solution to the county's problem.

"It would have been unusual if something had," he said. "If it was that obvious, it would have been done."

Streak buster

CARMEL HIGH School hurdler Brandy Falconer's record-tying, gold-medal performance in the hurdles enabled the Padres to break King City High's 12-year stranglehold on the Mission Trail Athletic League girls' track and field championships and win the MTAL title. Falconer, who took a tough spill in the regional championships the following week to fall out of contention, will nevertheless go on to represent CHS in the Central Coast Section championships in the triple jump. News notes:

Dead trees in Mission Trail Park to be cut, removed

BEGINNING NEXT week, the forestry division of the Carmel Public Works Department will be cutting down dead trees at the entrance to Mission Trail Park.

A total of 65 Monterey Pines and Willow trees will be removed by Spencers Tree Service, which has been contracted by the city.

The entire removal process will last about two weeks, according to city forester Gary Kelly.

Carmel Legion post honors Memorial Day this Saturday

IGNORING THE rest of the country, Carmel Post 512 of the American Legion will stick to tradition and celebrate Memorial Day this weekend.

The rest of the United States took a three-day weekend from May 22 through 24.

"We believe in keeping faith with tradition," said Jim Davis, newly-elected commander of the veterans' orginization. "May 30th means a great deal more to us than a three-day holiday."

Davis added that the post still observes the Fourth of July, Armistice Day and Christmas on traditional dates.

For its celebration, the Fort Ord Seventh Infantry Division band will present a musical program from 10:30 a.m. to 11 a.m. at Devendorf Park in Carmel.

Following the music, there will be a short program honoring those who died in the nation's past battles.

There will be a special tribute to the men who died earlier this month during an attack on the U.S.S. Stark in the Persian Gulf.

Taking part in the program will be the Continental Color Guard and a firing squad from Fort Ord.

Col. Gaylord E. Hatler, installation chaplain at Fort Ord, will offer the invocation and benediction, while Taps will be sounded by Joe Ingram of Post 512.

Also taking part in the ceremony will be the Carmel Police Department Honor Guard.

Foreign students find a home at Carmel High

THE CARMEL Chapter of AFS International/Intercultural Programs is in the process of seeking host families for the 1987-88 school year.

The chapter is presently hosting four students (the largest number in its 26-year history) and will be sending four Carmel High students to countries abroad for this upcoming school year.

In order for the program to continue we will need host families for the coming year. It is a great opportunity for your family to get to know a young person and his/her home country on a very personal level, by becoming their family for the year.

Most students are between the ages of 17-18, and are very eager to become a part of their host family and school. For more information you can contact either Karen Pullen 625-1091, or Gordon Clemens 624-4922, and they will be glad to answer any questions you may have about becoming a part of this great peace building program and educational experience for your whole family.

The four students being hosted by Carmel families this year are: Andi Muller from Bamberg, West Germany living with Jerry and Karen Pullen, Lara De Zuzio from Bienne, Switzerland living with John and Pat Ostarello, Irwan Tantu from Ujung-Pandang, Indonesia living with Jim and Karen Baker, and Joana Fernandes from Rio de Janeiro, Brazil living with Richard and Amelia Franke.

All students have been very active members of Carmel High and have achieved honors in their academic pursuits. They will be leaving at the end of June to return home.

Rabid bat found in city, pet vaccinations advised

By DAVID LELAND

EARLIER THIS month a rabid bat was discovered in Carmel, which prompted animal care officers to warn pet owners to inoculate their pets. Many times, because there is no law demanding it, people do not give their cats rabies shots. But cats are often more prone to being bitten than dogs.

IN THE wake of a small bat having been diagnosed as having rabies in Carmel, animal care officials are advising all pets owners to vaccinate their animals — especially cats.

But while this is the fourth rabid bat the SPCA has handled in the county this year, Jim Bennett, SPCA community relations manager, said there is no cause for alarm.

"With bats it's a way of life," he said. "They're here. They're like most animals, they won't bother you if you don't provoke them."

Since January the SPCA has responded to 68 calls where bats have been cited, about 7 to 8 percent have tested positive for rabies, according to the Monterey County Public Health Department.

The most recent bat discovery occurred May 14 at Santa Fe Street and Second Avenue, where a patch of ivy was being removed.

The woman whose house the bat was found at wishes to remain anonymous.

As the ivy was removed, the bat flew onto the woman's driveway, where her cat began to play with the animal before the SPCA could be called.

While the SPCA reported that there did not appear to be any bite marks on the cat or the bat, the law states that the cat must be quarantined or put to sleep, Bennett said.

Currently the cat is under a six-month quarantine at its owner's home, where an animal control officer will check on its condition weekly.

For some reason, cat owners are often lax in giving their cats rabies shots at the same time they inoculate their dogs, said Valerie Henderson, Carmel animal control officer.

She said the cats are as prone to getting rabies as any other animal, perhaps more so, because they stray farther from home and explore the wilds more at night. Bats are a nocturnal animal.

She also cautioned people against killing a bat if they find one. The only way county officials can test for rabies is with a brain scan on the bat while it is alive.

The SPCA recommends wetting down the bat with a hose in order to keep it from flying while the SPCA is called.

As far as getting bats out of your attic, the SPCA's Bennett advised property owners to consult an exterminator because the county will not go into a person's house for preventive measures.

As far a people are concerned, Henderson said the bats found in the area are small. The only place their teeth can puncture a person is where the skin is thin. Such as in between the fingers or on the lips.

IN ORDER to conserve the city's depleted water resources, the Carmel Public Works Department is offering free, unlimited water for landscaping purposes. Free city water available for Carmel residents only

By DAVID LELAND

FOR THE next four months, Carmel residents shouldn't have to worry about how much water they use for landscaping purposes. All they need to do is call the city and put out a container to be filled.

The trial program, approved by the Carmel City Council earlier in the month, will begin May 29. There is no charge for the water.

All residents need to do is to call the Carmel Public Works Department at 624-3543 to set up an appointment for delivery. All deliveries will be made on Fridays throughout the summer.

There is no limit to the amount of water that customers can request, according to Gary Kelly, city forester. The only requirement is that residents have a container large enough to hold the liquid and that the container be placed within 50 feet of the street.

The public works department has a 1,000-gallon truck that will transport the water from one of two city-owned wells, Kelly said.

One well is located in Mission Trail Park, while the other is adjacent to the Del Mar parking lot at the foot of Ocean Avenue.

Both are spring-fed wells and have 10,000-gallon storage tanks. The city has been using water from the wells for irrigation for the past 10 years.

With residents taking advantage of the service, city officals hope to cut down on water use and bolster the city's reserves. Those have been diminished because of the lower-than-average rainfall, Kelly said.

Kelly cautioned that the water is not for drinking (nonpotable), but the health department has tested it and given it the OK for landscaping uses.

Fire personnel on emergency status

THE SAN BENITO-MONTEREY Ranger Unit of the California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection (CDF), reported that all fire-going personnel of the ranger unit have been place on emergency response status.

The personnel effected will shift from a 40-hour week to a 72-hour duty week. This move is being made to get ready for fire season.

Because the southern area of Monterey County and the eastern area of San Benito County are in a state that will support wildfire, the following stations will be providing one engine coverage seven days a week: King City, Bradley, and Bear Valley. Carmel and Hollister are at 24-hour manning due to contracts to provide structural fire protection. As other areas of the ranger unit reach the dry state that can support wildfire the fire stations covering those areas will be opened for fire response on seven-day coverage.

The CDF is preparing for the coming fire season. Now is the time to clear flammable vegetation away from buildings. The law requires a 30-foot clearance around all structures. This is a basic measure to protect buildings form wildfires that might occur during the summer and fall months.

IT SEEMS HIGHLY UNLIKELY YOU'LL EVER NEED TO DRIVE A CAR THAT CAN GO 132 MPH, DAY AND NIGHT, FOR 62,000 MILES STRAIGHT.
BUT JUST IN CASE YOU DO.

Late last year, three standard-production Saab 9000s were taken to the Alabama International Speedway in Talladega, Alabama for an unusual test drive:

Twenty days straight at top speed.

The result? Twenty-one new world and international records including the highest average speed (132 mph) ever recorded for a production car driven this distance.*

Of course, you probably shouldn't directly apply these results to your everyday driving. But the fact remains, not one, but all three Saabs finished. Which would certainly seem to say something about their performance and endurance abilities.

Abilities you're invited to test drive yourself. Albeit over a shorter distance. And preferably at a much reduced speed.

SAAB
The most intelligent cars ever built.

*All records subject to Federation International de L'Automobile (FIA) recognition. Tests conducted under NASCAR and FIA sanction. Shell Oil, Pirelli and the Garrett Corporation, maker of the Saab 9000's turbocharger, also participated in this test. Stop by for details.

Carmel's trees to become object of intensive study

By DAVID LELAND

THANKS TO its unique urban forest setting, Carmel has been selected as the ideal place to study how trees bear up under the pressures of city life.

Under the watchful eye of the U.S. Forestry Service and the University of California College of Natural Resources at Berkeley, varying stress factors will be studied by researchers Joe McBride and David Nowak beginning this summer.

"It's quite an honor to be selected by them — it's not an inexpensive study," said Gary Kelly, city forester, who added the $30,000 study will come at no expense to Carmel.

At the end of the investigation, which is expected to last from three to six months, the city will be given accurate data to work with.

"We will be given a final report," Kelly said, "that will hopefully determine what predisposes trees to disease and stress factors."

Yes. Trees also are affected by the daily grind of hustle and bustle, according to a research proposal presented to the city.

The researchers cite air pollution, limited root space, poor soil, chemicals from washing sidewalks and light extremes as some possible culprits harming the trees.

Nowak and McBride will conduct their study on both the ground and through aerial photos, using infrared pictures to sample the Monterey Pines being studied.

"Signs and symptoms of a weakened host can be measured," said Nowak and McBride in their proposal. "Stressed trees will exhibit increased numbers in dead branches, reduced growth and reduced-size foliage."

The researchers initially will begin their study by randomly selecting 860 sample trees. These will be contained in 172 city blocks.

Forested areas for study will be selected through the use of aerial photos. Nowak and McBride will chose those areas by their distance and direction from the city. They will also sample park areas within the city.

Two ground methods to be used to study trees for stress are the pressure bomb and shigometer.

The pressure bomb can be used to measure water column tension in the tree, while the shigometer reads electrical resistance.

"By obtaining quantitative measures of stress, environmental and physical tree conditions that lead to increased stress can be determined," the researchers said.

"By knowing what conditions lead to increased stress, various controls could be implemented to mitigate the stress factors," they added.

Primarily, the researchers will be comparing the differing stress problems between the urban forest and a natural forest setting.

These will include how the red turpentine beetle attacks the two, how often disease attacks and how well measured environmental and physical variables predict actual stress levels.

The researchers also are recommending a followup test to reexamine their findings.

"The most logical extension of this study in future years would be to study how the stress levels in both the urban and natural forest changes," McBride said. "This extension would involve both the measurment of the amount stress level change and the rate of change."

Memories of Dorie

IT'S BEEN over three years now since she lived among us, sharing her magic. Did you know Dorie D'Angelo, the Carmel lady who cooperated with the angels to effect many a healing? Did you attend her Angel Healing Circle on Fridays, when she shared her time, energies, and beliefs with the general public? Pure love was her lodestar, her most dynamic healing force, I always felt. From her unique angelic perspective, she saw the good (God) in others. In doing so, she built a temple out of the ruins of many broken lives. I still miss her.

It was in Toronto, where Dorie worked as a physiotherapist, that she met Andre D'Angelo, who was to become her second husband. After their marriage, they chose to come to California, and to make Carmel their home. Dorie felt she was destined to marry Andre, and to have the last name that translates "of the angels," as she had always been extremely aware of these messengers of God, arranged her life for her.

Andre's active, curious mind was a perfect match for her own, in their seeking of truth and wisdom. Together, they studied new ideas, techniques, healing methods, always open to the unknown. Long before I knew them, I recall seeing them at the local parapsychology lectures, and wondered who they were. The stunning white-haired lady, generally dressed in rich burgundy or royal blue, had an aura of love about her, like a powerful lamp. It made you want to know her.

HOW DORIE first became aware of her angelic power which developed into her unusual healings needs a bit of explanation. The focal point was in 1968, when she had an intense spiritual experience. It validated her belief that she was to be used as an instrument for healing. This is how it happened.

Andre, her beloved husband, had such terrible pains in his head that he felt he was dying. Nothing Dorie could do gave him any relief. She worked with his temples with her hands, trying to make him feel better, to no avail. She was frantic with fear. It was Christmas Eve and no doctor was available.

It was then that Dorie met her spiritual doctor, Dr. Kirk. She suddenly looked up to see the form of a stranger standing beside her, a man in his middle 50s. He had gray hair and wore an old-fashioned salt and pepper tweed suit, a flounce tie, rimless glasses.

"If you are willing to do as I say," he told her, "I can save your husband's life. But you must follow orders."

Dorie followed the man's instructions to the letter. Afterward, Andre slept on into Christmas Day, when the doctor appeared to her once more. He told Dorie how to direct her fingers to further relieve the pressure of an old wound inside his head. The headaches never came back.

This was the first of hundreds of visits from Dr. Kirk, who had practiced medicine in Edinburgh, Scotland, in the 1800s. (Dorie had his two small volumes, called Papers on Health, printed in 1892, in her bookcase, upon his own recommendation that she look them up!)

"It was incredible," Dorie said later, in recalling the story. "I felt as if I was in the middle of a fairy tale. I din't tell anyone about it for a long while, as I knew people would not believe me!"

But that fear of criticism had not kept her from using her newly realized "gift." One day, near the Carmel Post Office, she saw a lady in an open doorway double over with pain, having a heart attack. Dorie promptly went to her, asked if she could place her healing hands on the region of pain. The woman recovered almost immediately.

Dorie knew there was a huge responsibility with this great gift. She must serve as a point of light for those that needed help. Requesting no fee, she dedicated herself to that service. Along with her physiotherapy message and treatment, she combined the cooperation of the angels as well as the assistance of her spirit doctor, Dr. Kirk.

MY INTRODUCTION to this unusual lady, who dared to live her beliefs, began with my consistent backaches. Four doctors, ranging all the way from general practitioner to chiropractor to acupuncturist, had done nothing for me.

"If you really want help, go to see Dorie," a mutual friend advised me. "She succeeds, where others have failed!" He also showed me the chapter on her in David St. Clair's book, Psychic Healers. Since I was tired of being half-ill all the time, I promptly phoned her.

Dorie's warm response surprised me. A patient from out of town was not able to make it today, had to cancel, and yes, there would be time for me this afternoon. Could I come over at once?

Dorie answered the door herself, looking up at me with her cherub face and twinkling blue eyes. Her hair was pearly-white luminescence. To me she looked like an angel herself. I felt warm and good inside, in a realm of total acceptance.

Books on every subject cluttered the light, airy living room. There were angels everywhere, made of glass, wire, paper, ceramic...lending an ethereal ambiance. I couldn't help but express my delight.

Dorie waved her hands toward them and smiled. Her gentle voice continued. "Yes...just look at them...aren't they lovely? People keep bringing me the latest angel they've found...and then of course I've added a few of my own!"

We descended the steps to her cozy treatment room, her "angel room." A massage table, comfortable chairs and a couch in pastel colors, combined to make it a haven, a place of rest. Yet the dynamic center that my eyes caught was the brilliant painting of a guardian angel protecting a child as she crossed over a bridge. It struck a long-forgotten chord in me.

"I'm amazed," I told Dorie,..."I've not seen this picture since the days of my childhood, when it graced our spare bedroom in the middle west!"

My new friend was not surprised. "The angels have been pretty much ignored by the human race for some years now. It's really too bad, because not knowing about the angels makes you powerless to their help. They only come to us if you ask for them!"

Dorie's voice was like balm, as she worked over my body. Her hands were knowingly guided to the spots that needed attention. I had an inner conviction that I was on my way to good health; I believed in her, as she called upon her spirit doctor and the angels to assist her.

In semi-trance, Dorie took me to a favorite place in meditation, guiding me to meet my very own guardian angel. Suddenly I realized that I did not need to feel alone anymore, the fear that always haunted me. Tears slid down my cheeks, in gratitude for this knowledge, from the sheer joy of it.

I WAS hooked! Not only did my backaches leave me, but my perception was altered. I would never be the same again. To me it was a great honor, to be her friend. I was one of her "volunteers" whose phone number she kept handy. It was my pleasure to do her errands, letter-writing, or any of the other mundane tasks. Of prime importance was that Dorie have her time as free as possible, so that she could administer to the multitude who found their way to her for healings.

And come they did! After the St. Clair book came out, in particular, it gave her great exposure nationwide. A steady stream of requests for help came by letter and phone. To those who couldn't make it to come to her in person, she gave "absent" healings, working with the angels in their behalf at a particular time when the person to be healed "tuned in" as well.

Her patients came from as far away as New York City, South America, and even Switzerland. Dorie literally became a fountain of hope for many who had lost courage. They would go home feeling "recharged" with her tremendous healing energy. At times it worked for them by merely speaking to her over the phone.

Then there were the many local people, her "regulars" who looked to her for health care and maintenance. Her time was pushed to the limit. Yet Dorie could never turn anyone away. Somehow she'd make time for all who needed her. Whether they responded with a large bill, in appreciation, or a loaf of bread, it was the same with her. Dorie gave her best to all who came to her. Nor did it end there, with the first connection. The loving energy she aroused seemed to continue to work its spell in the receiver's life!

"We must love one another, like a family," she'd tell us constantly at her healing circle. From this premise of unconditional love, Dorie worked her miracles. I do not believe a person could cross her path without being the better for it.

Just being near her made me feel good, personally. She created an atmosphere of total love and acceptance. I used to tease her about "touching the hem of her garment," when some of us sat on the floor near her, as she taught her healing class. Dorie had a down-to-earth sense of humor and would laugh merrily at our nonsense.

One day the angels told Dorie that she needed to write a book about them, that it was the time in history when people needed to re-connect with their angels. How ever could she manage a book in her busy schedule? But finally, after three years of effort, she completed it. The name of it? Living With Angels, of course! Her theme reminds everyone that you have a guardian

OCEAN AVENUE BIDS ARE READ

The council chamber was packed to its fullest capacity with an overflow meeting on the sidewalk, on Tuesday evening, by those who were expecting the bids on Ocean Avenue work to be read.

It was a tense moment when the city clerk opened the envelopes. First came the Englehart Paving and Construction Co. with a bid of $30,550. Everyone leaned forward, strained, to catch the figures of the next bid. It was from S. Ruthven of Monterey and the amount was $27,984. All breathed once more.

Then Trustee Newberry gave the crowd a bad fright by stating that Ruthven's bid was higher than it should be in order to make the cost of the incidentals, plus the cost of the road, come within the amount collected from the assessments. He stated that the situation might be met by re-assessment, or by either of the alternatives, viz; that of revising the specifications and re-advertising for bids, or waiting until the fall of the year when the work might be done at a lower price.

TO DEDICATE GRAVES OF LONG—DEAD INDIANS AT MISSION SUNDAY

On Monday, Decoration Day, a very special religious rite will be performed at 9 o'clock at the Indian cemetery adjacent to Carmel Mission. A high mass of requiem will be celebrated over the graves where 3000 Indians converted to the Catholic faith lie buried. During the past few weeks men have been busy cleaning and reclaiming the graves, obliterated for many years past. Abalone shells and pieces of the original tiles adorn the graves, as was customary in mission days. California trees, shrubs and flowers have been planted, and the cemetery will be rededicated.

COUNCIL TO HEAR ROOM TAX REPORT WEDNESDAY NIGHT

The city council, during its regular June meeting on Wednesday evening, will receive a report and recommendations on a possible motel-hotel room tax levy. The report will be presented by members of the council's committee on administration, Mayor Eben Whittlesey and Councilman Francis Whitaker.

This morning Mayor Whittlesey stated that a study of the room tax possibility was undertaken as an exploration of ways and means to discover capital outlay funds "which are slipping behind in several areas."

FRIDAY MORNING

An Ominous Beginning to a Day of Conflict

Last Friday was the 20th, but it seemed more like a week earlier - Friday the 13th.

The day started out with a surprise meeting of local merchants and businessmen at La Playa Hotel. Ominously, no press was allowed in and no one would say much about what had gone on, but the subject of the conference was reportedly the upcoming evening meeting of the Carmel City Council and the growing hostility between the business and residential sections of Carmel.

Slated for that unusual Friday night council meeting was the second reading of an ordinance banning tour buses during the water crisis, proposed legislation on truck deliveries, and another possibly controversial appointment to the planning commission.

BARK BEETLES INVADE CARMEL IN THE SUMMER
By Greg D'Ambrosio
Carmel City Forester

Monterey Pine bark beetles are appearing in ever increasing numbers as the summer months approach. This insect is a major cause of Monterey Pine deaths, particularly in mature trees, trees growing on or near construction projects and especially those trees that have recently been pruned.

The insect is drawn by the scent of fresh pine sap and will bore into and feed on the tree's conductive tissues. Attacks are restricted to the exposed roots growing on the surface and the tree trunk from ground surface to a height of approximately eight to 10 feet. Infestations have been known to kill even healthy trees within a few months after the initial attack.

'Flying' is just a matter of mind over matter

By HOLLY MCFARLAND

CARMEL'S David Rosenkranz has been hopping for 10 years.

Rosenkrantz began a demonstration. Smiling, he settled into a lotus position on a foam mat, drew his head back and sprung 18 inches into the air using his mind instead of his legs.

DAVID ROSENCRANTZ of Carmel is an avid follower and teacher of TM — Transcendental Meditation — made famous by Maharishi Mahesh Yogi. Here Rosencrantz is seen "levitating," a technique produced through the use of TM. (Holly McFarland photo.)

"What I did was effortless and I've done it twice a day for 10 years," laughed Rosenkranz.

What he did in using his mind rather than legs was to demonstrate "hopping," a part of Trancendental Meditation (TM) that is one step below the ultimate power of levitation, Rosenkranz says.

Now 41, Rosenkranz has been teaching TM for 18 years, traveling throughout the country giving lectures and teaching its values. He has studied twice in India under TM's guru and spiritual leader, the Maharishi Mahesh Yogi.

Settled in a modest Carmel studio for the past year, Rosenkranz has been introducing Monterey Peninsula residents to TM.

One of the first misconceptions about TM is that it is a religion.

"TM is not a religion, but is a mental technique which allows the mind to experience the source of thought," explained Rosenkranz.

Another misconception is what kind of person can practice TM.

"Anyone who can think can transcend," said Rosenkranz, whose introductory program runs for 90 minutes a day for four days.

The benefits, he says, allows the "conscious mind to expand and experience a state of inner consciousness."

And if many people practiced TM, Rosenkranz says the world would be a far better place.

Over the years, TM students studying under the Yogi have meditated in large groups to promote world peace and harmony.

Studies, he claims, prove that TM practices have helped reduce crime and effect other social benefits.

For example, a delegation from the International Meditation Society journey to Nicaragua in 1977. During that time, the civil war dropped off dramatically, Rosenkranz said.

More important to the individual is TM allows a person to use more of the mind's potential.

"People now just use 5 or 10 percent of their mind's capacity," he said. "TM allows for 100 percent use of the mind, which is the state of pure consciousness."

TM also is a tool for relaxation, he said, in today's tension-filled world.

Scientific studies indicate TM relieves stress and gives a person more energy through the "harmonious interaction of a person's brain waves," he said.

During meditation, a person's body experiences a stage two to three times more restful, just like in the stages of deep sleep, he continued.

Hopping is just one of the more powerful steps in TM, and also more visible to the non-practitioner.

The next step is levitation, the final plateau before flight when a person "can move anywhere in the universe."

While Rosenkranz doesn't know anyone who can fly, levitation has been demonstrated in spectacular ways.

Just last year the Yogic Flying Competition was staged in Washington D.C. before scores of journalists. There, TM masters hopped in 50 meter sprints, jumped nearly six feet in one hopping leap, cleared hurdles over a 25-meter course and high-jumped more than two feet.

Because of such demonstrations, TM is beginning to gain acceptance throughout the world, Rosenkranz said.

"The Kitty Hawk flight flew 120 feet in the air for 12 seconds and everybody considered that a joke," he said. "Now the public looks at flying and takes it for granted. But when Yogi mentions physical levitation, the majority of the population looks at it as though it's a joke, but it won't be long before it's a household word."

The Covered Call Caper

Part II.
Ardith and the Almond Chicken.

THEY COULDN'T find her, Ardith, the Amazing One.

For a week the boys tried looking for her in the old haunts, places like Charley Wong's Wholesome Wonton over in Marina, or Monterey's famous Wok Around the Clock. No luck. If it hadn't been for several good helpings of mu shu pork, they would not have continued the search.

A week passed before she finally called.

"So sorry, gentlemen, but I've been on a special little caper of my own. You can meet me tonight at The Chopstick Gourmet in Aptos. I've been doing some major hanging out in the Santa Cruz area lately."

Later that evening in the privacy of a dimly-lit booth she proved she was still the Old Reliable One, the Master of the Riddles.

"Well boys, lay it on me. What is so urgent that it draws you here miles away from the foggy confines of the peninsula?

"We're looking," Bloom began, nonchalantly studying the extensive menu, "we're looking for the answer to a problem. An investment problem. An investment problem that might be difficult to explain, let alone understand."

"As it turns out, boys, it may not be easy for me to answer your questions in a satisfactory manner. All of my admittedly amazing mental powers are currently focused on figuring out how this restaurant makes its almond chicken."

"Nevertheless, Ardith, we want to know if you're ever considered the consequences of selling options against a stock you own for greater income and total return, something called covered call writing?"

"OK, boys. That's an easy one, easy to explain but maybe not so easy to understand. See if you can follow this.

"First, buy a good stock. Let's say you pick American Express, and let's say you buy it at $32."

"Second, sell an option that expires in three months. This option obliges you to sell your stock at $35, but it results in a credit of, say, one dollar per share. That is, you actually reduce your stock cost from $32 to $31 per share."

"So what's the big deal?" Piazza asked, munching a pot sticker. "Because of the option the owner of the stock will be obliged to sell his American Express to the speculator at $35 if the price of the stock goes to $35 or higher at the time the option expires."

"This is not a big deal, my fine Italian friend, it's a good deal. You and your chum from Kankakee should consider all the nuances of this strategy, just as I'm about to consider once again the subleties of the fabulous almond chicken we are about to enjoy."

The waiter hovered nearby, intrigued by the ongoing conversation.

"Consider the following. If you buy a stock and earn extra money by selling options, once, twice or numerous times, to the speculators who are betting your stock, American Express, can rise from 32 to 35, what is the net results? You can make money three ways: a small appreciation in the stock, the collection of quarterly dividends, and the collection of option income from the speculators. You could make three or four hundred dollars in a few months on a $32 investment in 100 shares of American Express."

"But you didn't deduct commissions from the profit!" the waiter interjected. His name was Ron, a dental student who eventually hoped to make oodles of money in the root canal game.

"That's true, Ron. But the returns can be quite good even when trasactions costs are deducted. Although nothing in the stock market can be guaranteed."

"I don't know if I totally understand this," Bloom began, "but I think I'm convinced of one thing. This is a relatively conservative program, something like an enhanced income strategy. This wouldn't be for someone who's in love with a stock and wants to see it go into orbit."

"One loves children and little bunnies, old buddy Bloom, one doesn't love a stock. Isn't the idea to realize a gain?"

"I've got it!" Ron the waiter piped up. At this point his other, disgruntled customers were impatiently waiting for their spring rolls. "I've got it. I buy American Express and I collect the dividends. I make money, I sell options to the speculators. I make money. American Express goes up to 35. I make money. What are the risks to this strategy?"

"I'll be very happy to tell you, Ron. But it will have to wait till next week when the boys run their next column. Now, Ron, about the recipe for the almond chicken..."

Next week: The conclusion: Risk vs. Reward.

(Messrs. Piazza and Bloom, associate vice presidents at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc., can be contacted for additional information at 373-1861 or P.O. Box 631, Monterey 93940.)

angel whose job it it to keep you from harm, to comfort and help you. And your angel can be called upon whenever you wish...for protectoin, help, or love.

On Jan. 9, 1984, at age 81, Dorie D'Angelo peacefully left this earth plane. At her own request, there was a "Celebration of Life" at the site of her usual circle meeting. More than 150 friends jammed the Boy Scout House at Eighth and Mission, for the final tribute of love to Dorie. Banners of rainbow colors floated above the mantle. Red roses, pink carnations, and the beloved wildflowers she adored, graced the tables with finger food and punch. We stumbled our way through her favorite songs: Climb Every Mountain, Impossible Dream, and the overwhelming How Great Thou Art." How Dorie must have sparkled with joy, observing the performance! Everyone cried and hugged one another, remembering Dorie's words, "We must love one another!"

Andre, her devoted husband of 24 years, continues her work today. In like fashion, calling upon the cooperation of the angels, this Angel Healing Group comes together each Friday at Sunset Center. Yes, Dorie still lives, through the angels. She continues to live in the hearts and minds of those she taught how to love. I'm sure she is still here, listening to the entreaties for help, still offering her best, if now from a higher perspective.

I feel rich, indeed, to have known Dorie D'Angelo, the "Angel Lady of Carmel."

PADRE PRATTLE

By Meredith May

Padre power

EACH YEAR Carmel High School sports fans flock to all sorts of sporting events, eager to se how "the team" will stand up to all its rivals. With the exception of the outstanding girls' swim team, it is always surprising to see which teams come out on top. This year, the Carmel High varsity boys' baseball team proved to be one of the school's most powerful teams in years.

Consisting of five seniors, five juniors, three sophomores, and one aspiring freshman, the Padres hit, ran and fielded their way into the champion's seat in the Mission Trail Athletic League. Helping guide the team toward its victorious position was coach John Lucido and assistant coach Mike Odello. In accordance with the team's superior record of 11-1, the Coach of the Year award was given to Lucido.

The team was so aggressive that it succeeded in breaking two Carmel High baseball records. Heavy-hitter Jason Pokrzwinski, nicknamed "Puck" for obvious reasons, put away 10 home runs. The Padres also had a record of seven players chosen for All-League honors: centerfielder Josh Banks, third baseman Beau Brushert, pitchers Kerry Woodson and Jim Courtney, second baseman Rene Diaz, first baseman Pokrzwinski and catcher Simon Laguens.

The second step after winning the MTAL title was to join the seven other teams in the Central Coast Section playoffs in Santa Cruz. Carmel was ranked third out of eight CCS teams after Harbor High and Monte Vista Christian. Unfortunately, Carmel lost their first CCS game to the North Monterey County Condors last Friday, 8-4, dropping them out of the playoffs.

Part of the reason for the loss could have been attributed to the fact that the Padres had traveled 50 miles and were unfamiliar with the Harvey West field, unlike their opponents who had previously played on the field.

Whatever the case, the Padres didn't come home without taking pride in their terrific record that got them into the CCS playoffs and the friendships they gained on the road.

Said pitcher Kerry Woodson, "All the members of the team are very close. Everyone is a friend. We have a family." There definitely is a special bond between members of any type of team...a statistical loss lasts only minutes, a bond of friendship will last for years.

After graduation she plans to major in architectural engineering in college.

PGAC art reception

THE PACIFIC Grove Art Center (PGAC) was packed with art buffs and fans on Friday evening for a reception to honor the artists whose works are now on display. Usually PGAC draws the curtain at 9 p.m. but it was 10:30 before the last patrons finally found the door to the outside world.

Gerry Richmond of Carmel Highlands and Donald Weygandt, professor of art at UCSC, proved to be special magnets. Gerry's work, which is owned by President and Mrs. Reagan (and many others, of course), has been working locally for the past 10 years. This Chicago native, transplated to the Los Angeles area for a number of years, is from a creative family and his large works are show in the David Henry Gill Gallery. He considers the PGAC one of the best spaces on the West Coast.

Monoprints by the popular artist Donald Weygandt are in the Hall Galleries and Susan Collins shows her paintings in the Elmarie Dyke Gallery.

Photographs by members of Handicapped Activities Unlimited (HAU) are featured in the Photo Gallery (through June 26). Their work is an outcome of a photography project funded by the Monterey County Cultural Council, Kiwanis of Monterey, M.P. Community Thrift Shop, National Pro-Am Youth Fund, and the Polaroid Foundation. Project participants used automatically-developing film to give them immediate feedback and shown are enlargements of those chosen by their instructor.

According to director Carolyn Becker, HAU has a long history of organizing art exhibitions which have included various forms — oil painting, watercolor, acrylics, fabric, and sculpture (carvings of clay, bronze, ceramic and wood).

Part of the attraction at the art reception at PGAC was the new improved lighting by Richard Greenberg. He did a great job with the funds available so far, and he has plans to continue as funds and gifts become available. So if you wish to spread a little light, you know where it is needed.

217TH BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION

The first Merienda was held in 1931 but this year the Monterey History and Art Association will celebrate Monterey's 217th birthday June 6 in Memory Garden at Pacific House. The traditional date of the first Saturday in June commemorates the landing of Father Junipero Serra and his first Mass under the oak tree on the shore of Monterey Bay.

The richness of local history continues to add color and charm to the current life here and certainly no time more than during the festivities of this special day.

La Favorita this year is Lisa Ann Eaton of Pacific Grove, who is a seventh-generation decendent of Mariano Castro (born in 1788 at the Presidio). Lisa, a freshman at MPC, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Eaton of Pacific Grove. While at Pacific Grove High School she served as concert mistress for the orchestra, participated in the all-state honor orchestra and the Central Coast Section honor orchestra. Currently, she takes violin lessons, enjoys playing the piano and writing poetry.

Doncellas are Meredith Smith of Carmel, daughter of Thomas and Yvonne Smith and freshman in Santa Catalina School and Karie Wolter of Carmel Valley, daughter of Russel and Karen Wolter, a junior at Carmel High School.

Cake bearers will be Curt Graham and Aaron Bliesner of Carmel and Henry Cartwright of Monterey.

SOCIAL CURES FOR SUMMER DOLDRUMS

The summer social season changes gears but does not come to a complete halt by any means. Fun moves to more outdoor activities and often there are more out-of-town visitors.

For instance, summer and the seashore returns us all to our childhood, or turns us to that child still inside us since the first day we remember playing with shovel and sand bucket by the mightly sea. Apropos for the season, the Monterey Bay Aquarium has just opened "Toys Ahoy: Playing By The Sea" in the second floor art gallery.

There are toys from all over the world relating to sand and foam — sand buckets (from Walt Disney Corp.), a number of miniatures of Noah's Ark, antique dolls, tin wind-up toys (from Carmel artist Barclay Ferguson), and plenty of toys for the young-at-heart!...such as intricate yacht models, hand-carved cribbage boards, and antique boats. One case combines the two: "Child's Play Teaches Grown-up Ways."

For those who love to rub shoulders with royalty (or at least someone who is married to royalty), there is a reception and dinner dance honoring Capt. Mark Phillips (who is married to Queen Elizabeth's only daughter, Anne) on June 6 at the Monterey Plaza. The event is simply billed as "The Event." (What else?) Of course, the captain will spend the day at the Pebble Beach Equestrian Center holding a horse clinic for the horsey set.

Now, for all you single ladies — more than 40 of the most eligible bachelors around will prance down a runway and go on the auction block June 19 at the Monterey Sheraton...doctors, lawyers, football players, community leaders. You bid on the bachelor of your choice along with his date package. Date ideas go from being up-in-the-air (in a hot air balloon) to down-in-the-pits (the racing pits that is) to an elegant evening at the theater.

The Frohman Fan Club sponsors the "Bachelor Auction" so that Frohman Academy may bring a performing arts program to elementary and secondary schools. So, your bid for a "luxury date" will not only be fun and exciting but tax-deductible as well. You come out ahead and who knows where it all might lead? Hosts for that evening will be television and stage stars Jo Anne Worley and Roger Perry.

For those lazy (or busy) days when you simply can't bear to get to the kitchen, (or when out-of-town guests suddenly pop in) Ristorante Delfino has a solution — at least once a week they do. Beginning June 3 (and every Wednesday through August 19) they plan a "Summer Festival of Wines" with the opportunity to taste wines which are yet-to-be-released and from private cellar reserves followed by a five-course dinner created to complement the evening's wine selections. To reserve: 646-1706.

How would you like to win a party? Entertain in beautiful La Mirada without lifting a finger? The Jesters of MPMA are selling raffle tickets at $1 per for an elegant gourmet dinner with winner permitted to select date, dinner, and nine other guests. The evening includes after-dinner entertainment while sipping brandy. Buy those tickets and let the Jesters (if you think you're lucky enough) give your dinner party.

For younger citizens with time on their hands this summer, the Frohman Academy offers a summer musical theater camp beginning July 6 (for ages 9-18) and a youth band beginning July 27 (for those 11-18).

Don't despair, we will bring you more ideas for your summer social life.

SERRA SCHOOL TEACHER GARNERS AWARD

Mary Marchi, first-grade teacher and assistant principal at Junipero Serra School in Carmel, received the Sister Miriam Joseph Farrell Award for Distinguished Teaching, at the National Catholic Educational Association's annual convention in New Orleans in April.

The prestigious award is given annually by the association to a teacher in each of the 12 NCEA regions. Marchi received the award for Region XI, which includes Hawaii, Guam, Nevada, California, Oregon and Utah.

CARMEL VALLEY PERSPECTIVE

Applicants sought for Carmel Valley evaluation committee

FIFTH DISTRICT Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman is seeking applicants to serve on the Carmel Valley Citizens Subdivision Evaluation Committee.

"Now that we have our newly-adopted and court-approved Carmel Valley Master Plan to guide our planning for the next 20 years, citizens of the affected area will have the opportunity to participate in implementation of the plan. This is the opportunity we have demanded; now we can assure that orderly development, in keeping with the rural character of the Valley, can take place," Strasser Kauffman stated.

The committee will contribute to the formulation of bylaws and participate in the initial meetings by developing a scoring system for evaluating land use, rural quality and visual resources, water hydrology, traffic, noise, air quality, geology, ecology, cultural resources, public services and hazards. Committee members will evaluate and score minor and standard subdivision proposals within the Carmel Valley Master Plan area.

Strasser Kauffman urges interested residents within the Carmel Valley Master Plan boundaries to contact her office at 624-6515 or at 1200 Aguajito Road, Monterey 93940, to apply.

Cachagua area plan needs participation by area residents

THE MONTEREY County Board of Supervisors has appointed a Citizens Advisory Committee to help in developing an area plan for Cachagua, but citizen input is needed.

Public meetings of the committee are held regularly in Cachagua. Residents interested in participating are asked to sign a mailing list at the meetings or by writing directly to:

Cachagua Area Plan Mailing List
Monterey County Planning Department
PO Box 1208
Salinas, CA 93902.

Public participation is encouraged at these meetings to insure that property owners and residents have their concerns reflected in the Cachagua Area Plan that is to be developed, according to Joel Panzer, county planner.

For more information contact Panzer at 422-9018.

CITY COUNCIL
CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA
ORDINANCE 87-14

AN ORDINANCE ESTABLISHING A WATER MANAGEMENT PLAN FOR THE PROTECTION OF WATER SUPPLIES FOR EXISTING USES, CONSERVATION, AND THE DISTRIBUTION OF WATER RESOURCES TO NEW DEVELOPMENT.

WHEREAS, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District has adopted a long term water allocation plan which limits the water resources available to the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea to 5.542% of the amount chosen by the Water Management District to be used by the jurisdictions within its boundaries; and

WHEREAS, this allocation creates a total supply of 1030.94 acre feet of water per year for Carmel-by-the-Sea; and

WHEREAS, the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea has asked in past years for an adjustment in the water allocation and is currently asking for an adjustment in the water allocation; and

WHEREAS, the use of water within the City has been steadily increasing since the drought of 1975 through 1977, and for the most recent twelve-month period the City consumed more than 98% of its total water allocation; and

WHEREAS, the City Council has identified several classes of interestes within the City that compete for availble water resources, including vacant lots of record, pending projects with one or more approvals, developed property capable of additional development, and the intensification of land uses within existing buildings; and

WHEREAS, water conservation can reduce current levels of consumption and thereby provide water for the development of vacant lots of records, pending projects and some limited new development; and

WHEREAS, water conservation can also provide water to establish a reserve which can buffer the City from annual fluctuations in consumption patterns caused by weather, economic conditions and demographic changes; and

WHEREAS, the use of water for new development must be managed through a coordinated program that equitably protects at least some development potential for all properties while remaining consistent with the City's General Plan and Local Coastal Plan; and

WHEREAS, the City has the responsibility under the Constitution and Statutes of the State of California to plan and guide its own development in a manager that reflects local conditions, yet is sensitive to the regional impacts of local actions; and

WHEREAS, the City recognizes the unique, regional responsibilities of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District but finds that the management of the City's Water resources can best be attained through local actions that are fully consistent with local planning goals, objectives, policies and ordinances and which do not result in the suspension of local autonomy in land use matters.

AAA 4 DIAMOND AWARD PRESENTED TO CARMEL INNS

The California State Automobile Association (AAA) Monterey District Office, has presented the American Automobile Association's Four Diamond Award plaque for 1987 to Bill Asp, manager of the Adobe Inn in Carmel, and Gary Luce, general manager of Carmel's Carriage House Inn.

According to CSAA President A. F. Federico, a Four Diamond Rating is awarded only to those exceptional properties which "significantly exceed AAA requirements in most physical and operational categories." There were only 83 such awards this year throughout the entire 45 counties of Northern and Central California and the State of Nevada, which comprise CSAA's service territory.

Under the AAA Diamond rating system, accommodations undergo rigorous inspections by CSAA's qualified field representatives and, if the property meets the stated criteria for recommendations, they are then assigned an overall rating of 1 to 5 Diamonds.

The higher ratings are an indication of the degree to which basic standards are exceeded. Federico noted "only a fifth of the properties in the country meet the Triple A's requirements for recommendation. It should also be noted than even a One Diamond signifies a quality establishment."

LORIMAR TELEVISION NAMES JIM MCGILLEN PRESIDENT

REAL ESTATE TODAY

The Trust Deed — What Is It?

By Jayde Thompson

If you have borrowed money to pay for your home, as most people have, you probably had to sign a Deed of Trust in addition to a note promising to repay the money. This trust deed is a legal document (also known as a "legal instrument") by which you pledge the property itself as a guarantee that you will make good on the loan.

Though there is no standard trust deed, there are some terms that appear in many of them. As the borrower, you are considered to be the trustor. The lender is the beneficiary, and the third party who can initiate the sale of the property under certain circumstances is known as the trustee.

If, for some reason spelled out in the trust deed, you, the trustor, default on your payments, an Acceleration Clause in the trust deed gives the beneficiary the right to declare the full amount of the loan due and payable. The Due on Sale Clause gives the beneficiary the right to insist that the note be paid off when the property changes ownership.

Each lender, whether a conventional savings and loan institution or a private party, draws up their own notes and trust deeds. They can vary greatly. It is important to read and understand these documents before you sign them. Professional Realtors are thoroughly knowledgeable about trust deeds — if you'd like to find out more about them, call me, Jayde Thompson, your Carmel specialist at Real Estate By The Sea at 624-1444 or stop by my office at San Carlos and Seventh.

BUSINESS BEAT

By Nancy Hills

Still here

GONE, BUT not forgotten.

One of those lovely little shops Carmel was/is well known for has closed because of an increase. Not in the rent — in the family. Twins to be precise.

Old World Cloth, formerly located on Lincoln between Ocean and Seventh, has packed its fabric bolts, herbs and antique pillows and shut its doors.

One of its owners had twins last year. If you have children, you'll know what that means. If you don't, nothing I say will could explain it.

The former shop owners and partners Shirley Jensen and Martha Thorne (Thorne's the one with twins), are still on the scene, however. Both are doing what they were known for best at Old World Cloth, plus expanding their repertoire.

Thorne — a more enterprising woman than I — has purchased Tancredi & Morgan antiques and giftwear in the Valley Hills Shopping Center in Carmel Valley.

Sharon Tancredi has up and moved to Maine, something she has been planning for a long time, Thorne said.

Thorne, mother of twins Megan and Gwyneth, said she will continue the antique shop much the same as always, but plans to expand the American country antiques line to include country antiques from Europe. She'll also continue doing interior design through the shop.

From Old World Cloth, Thorne has brought her dried flower and herb wreaths and has started doing some new designs and styles. She's enlarging the section to include all kinds of things for gardening and items relating to herbs and botanicals.

Thorne said she'll also be doing her embroidery, something she was known for at Old World Cloth.

For Jensen, doing what she used to do at the shop means interior design.

Her new business, Forget-Me-Nots on Mission between Fifth and Fourth avenues, is the petite headquarters for her design studio. Petite is the operative word here though the Carmel cottage has room for samples of her work.

"I have the 'essence' of a kitchen, and the 'essence' of a bathroom, and the 'essence' of a bedroom in different rooms," Jensen explained.

(Space, in the tiny cottage, is also of the essence.)

"It's a look that I sell," Jensen said, describing it as English country cottage in Carmel.

"I definitely want that Carmel look," she added.

Needless to say, she also does very well in larger spaces.

In the studio, Jensen has available some of the fine chintz and Liberty of London fabrics from England the two carried at Old World Cloth.

She also has a few of the antique pillow cases and laces the shop was known for, and, of course, she can order any other type of fabric or interior accessory a customer wants.

So what's happening to the former Old World Cloth space? Katy Curry, owner of Katy's Cottage next door, currently has the lease. She may do some retail there and could be moving a few of her tables from the tiny restaurant. That's all up in the air still, and will be decided by the planning commission.

FROM OLD WORLD TO NEW

Eclectic, definitely eclectic. From lace and linens to Porsches and pistons.

CAPTURING THE "essence" of good taste, Shelly Jensen, former co-owner of Old World Cloth, has opened an interior design studio on Mission between Fifth and Sixth. Her studio has samples of her work and the look she creates for her clients. (Holly McFarland photo.)

Sixth. The main store at the mouth of the valley will remain in business.

Owner Rocky Harter said the new location will be a smaller version of the store in The Crossroads with "all kinds of gifts and accessories related to cars. '

That means those stuffed pillow cars, books, posters, automotive art, key chains, graphics, clothing and Porsche design line of men's accessories — sunglasses, wallets and leather goods.

No carburetors or differentials, though. This stuff is for the driver, not the backyard mechanic.

The clothing includes hats, T-shirts, jackets and sweatsuits inscribed with different names of car models.

Most of the books, Harter said, are about car companies like Jaguar, Volkswagen, Porsche and whatever.

We're all confident that this shop will last longer than the last one in that location, European Treasurers. It was gone so fast, you'd think it was a speeding Ferrari. Before that, the space was occupied by Tutto Bella floral design, another long-distance winner.

TWENTY-ONE YEARS

Just when it comes of age. After 21 years in Carmel, Dock Lor has closed his Canton Restaurant and retired due to illness.

His restaurant across from the post office on Fifth between San Carlos and Dolores, however, will go on. It has a new name, new menu and new owner. Canton Restaurant is now The Plum Tree Chinese Restaurant, owned and operated by Sylvia Bullard.

Bullard said she will be offering all kinds of Chinese foods using favorite dishes from different provinces in the country.

That includes old favorites like sweet and sour, lemon chicken and orange-flavored duck.

Her new cook was trained in Beijing (once called Peking), and, in addition to his many culinary talents, specializes in Chinese pasta.

That's the real thing, folks. Pasta was one of those little things Marco Polo picked up during his travels in China and introduced to Italy.

The Chinese had it first, though, as with so many other items. Raviolis, spaghetti and all kinds of noodles cooked in many different ways — all from scratch.

Bullard said she will offer fresh foods, low-fat and low-sodium cooking.

"No MSG," she said emphatically.

Right now the restaurant is open and serving, but Bullard said they are working on settling into a routine, getting it operating smoothly. The official opening date is set for June.

Bullard also owns Dynasty Imports in the American Tin Cannery.

NEW GALLERY

It worked out in the end. Carol and Ira Pomeroy have opened their art gallery here in Carmel, and a happy with the location.

The Pomeroys first tried to get a permit for a space that was not previously a gallery, but the planning commission decided against that — despite considerable praise for the quality of art the Pomeroys were offering. Just couldn't create another art gallery space.

But a little hunting around and the Pomeroys found the John Miller Gallery in the Paseo San Carlos courtyard between Ocean and Seventh. The Millers were retiring and ready to sell.

Now the space is Pomeroy Gallery of Fine Arts, offering

Carmel residents asked to choose phone companies

Carmel telephone customers with prefixes 624, 625, and 626 are getting the opportunity to choose among six long distance companies, under Pacific Bell's Easy Access program, according to Jim Bower, area manager for Pacific Bell.

15,105 business and residence customers in the community will soon receive Easy Acess "ballots" in the mail, asking them to choose a long distance company by May 27. Customers will be hooked in to the company of their choice on June 27, 1987.

On the Monterey Peninsula, telephone customers in Monterey, Pacific Grove and parts of Pebble Beach were converted to Easy Access in June 1985. Seaside was converted last January. All Salinas customers will be converted by mid-1987. Marina and Big Sur are not currently scheduled.

In Carmel, customers are being asked to choose one of the following: American Express Expressphone, AT&T Long Distance, City Phone, MCI, or GTE Sprint. Business customers may also choose Western Union Long Distance Services.

To choose a company, customers may simply check the appropriate box on their ballot and mail back the self-addressed, stamped card to Pacific Bell. However, customers who wish to choose American Express Expressphone or City Phone should call either of these two carriers directly since both companies are not listed on the ballot.

"Once a customer chooses a long distance company, he or she will be able to access that company's services, simply by dialing "1" plus the area code (if outside 408) and the number," said Bower.

"And with Easy Access, our customers can use any of the six long distance companies serving their area, as well. All they need to do is dial a five-digit 'company code' first," he added. The company codes are listed in the Easy Access ballot package.

There is no fee for making your Easy Access choice if the selection is made prior to May 27, or within six months after that date.

"traditional art from mostly living artists," Carol Pomeroy said. All original works, she added, of oils, acrylics and some watercolors.

At this time, the Pomeroys are featuring about eight different artists, primarily from the United States, but some from other countries.

For 17 years, Carol Pomeroy operated the gallery next door to her husband's medical practice in Cypress. Not the best place for an art gallery, she said, but it worked out very nicely.

Carmel, however, is what they have been aiming for and finally achieved now that Dr. Pomeroy has retired.

"It's lovely here," she said. "I can't tell you how much I enjoy it."

LOOKING FOR A FEW GOOD FOLK

The Carmel Kiwanis Club is going strong and wants others to share in their good works and good fun.

The object of the service club, according to 1987 club president, Tom Nash, is to encourage spiritual rather than material values; encourage living by the Golden Rule; promote higher social, business and professional standards: develop a more intelligent, aggressive and serviceable citizenship; and provide a means to form enduring friendships, perform altruistic service and build better communities.

I'm all for that.

Some of the club's activities include a charity wine tasting at the Highlands Inn, salmon dinner at the Church of the Wayfarer, supporting the Carmel High School Key Club, working closely with the Carmel Mission Kiwanis and selling programs at Laguna Seca races.

"Our membership is small enough that club members get to know each other and each other's families, but we're large and active enough to pull together and accomplish the fund-raising activities that are so important to our support of local charities," Nash wrote to me.

Give him a call if you're interested.

GOOD FEELINGS

If the last story got you bent out of shape, try going to Armstrong & Harris on Junipero Avenue between Fifth and Sixth avenues.

Blackburn & Blackburn's former location has been taken over by Greg Horkey of The Back Shop in Monterey. The Back Shop offers products for the sore and "don't want to be sore" back.

The new Carmel store, called Armstrong & Harris, is not just an expansion of the Monterey shop, Horkey explained. It offers more health accessories than just for the back.

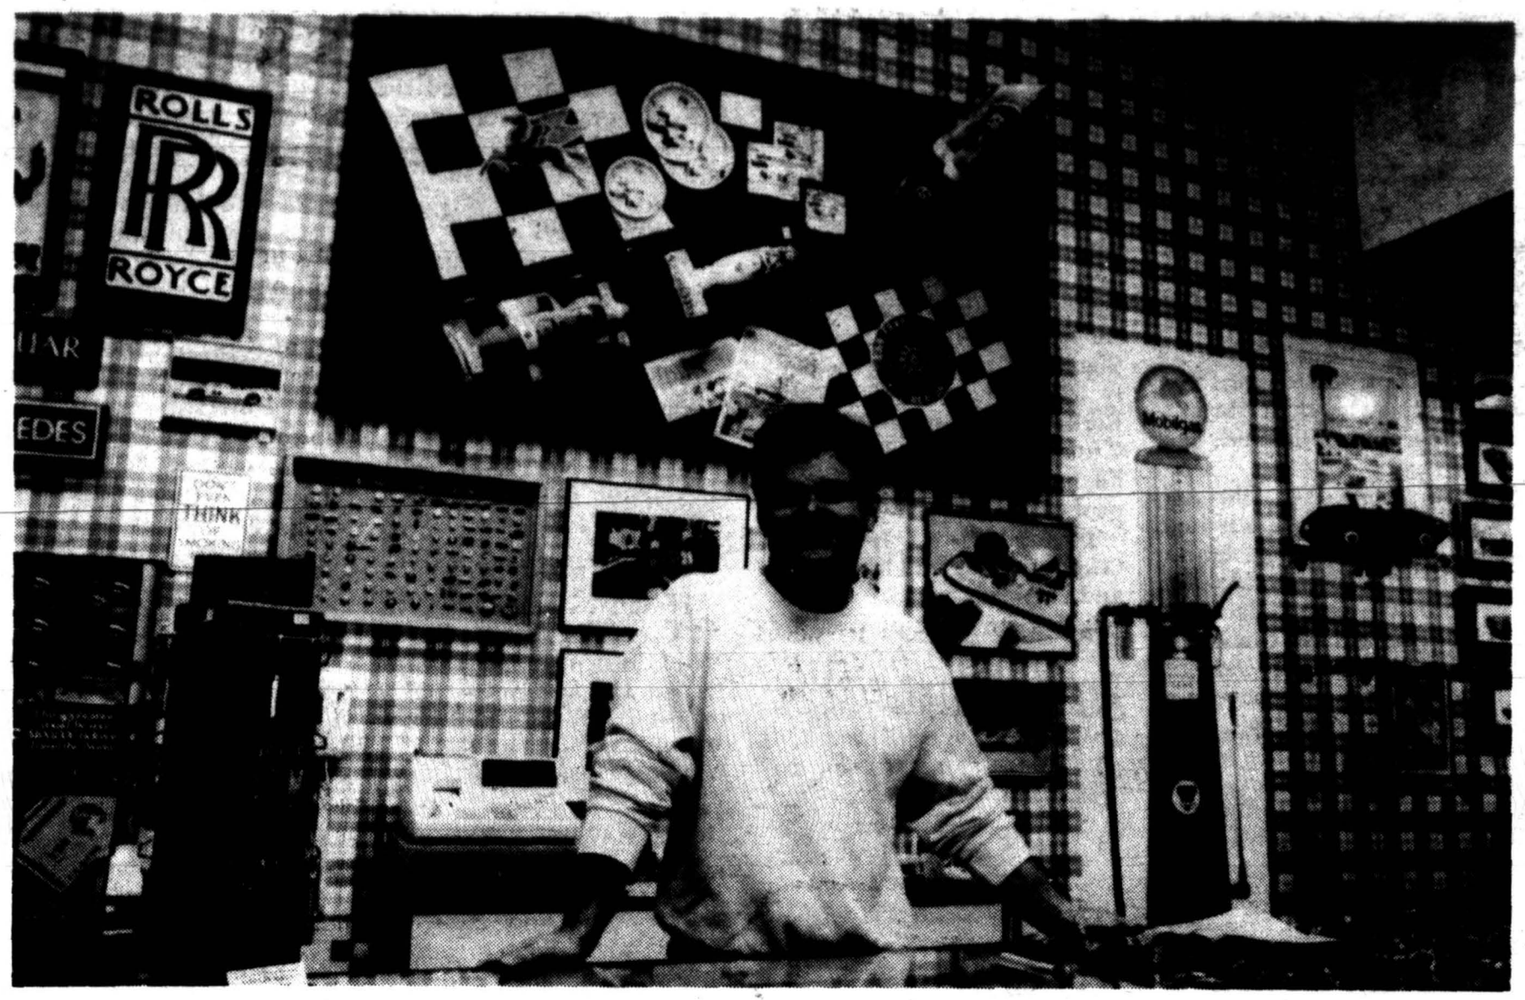
Included in the inventory, he said, are "orthopedically-designed chairs for the home or office" including recliners, rockers, beach chairs and massage chairs. They also have that rather interesting looking kneeling chair developed in Europe.

If that's not enough, he has cervical pillows, lumbar supports, vibrators and foot massagers.

Non-back health and fitness products are so diverse they include dental products, protein powder for gaining and losing weight, jump ropes and weight scales. For the more active fitness candidate there are swim goggles, aerobic weights and some exercise equipment.

The store even carries the Ice Man lunchbox which has an ice pack that can go into the freezer.

RELAXING WITH his feet up is Greg Horkey, owner of Armstrong & Harris on Junipero in the former location of Blackburn & Blackburn Coin Shop. Armstrong & Harris sells health items, with an emphasis on all kinds of products for the back. (Holly McFarland photo.)



ROCKY HARTER is looking forward to opening a second For Car Buffs Motor Boutique in The Mall on San Carlos between Ocean and Sixth. The main store in The Crossroads will also continue to sell automotive related gift items. (Holly McFarland photo.)

Directed by Elia Kazan, the 1954 movie won eight Academy Awards and runs 108 minutes. It will be shown at 8 p.m. in the MPC main theater.

Admission is $3, $2 for senior citizens, or purchase a Film Society membership for $14.

Ruth M. Taylor

Ruth Melsome Taylor of Carmel, a retired nurse, died April 28 at the home of her son in Astoria, Ore. She was 84.

Born March 24, 1903 in San Francisco, the daughter of a ferry-boat captain, William Melsome, she was raised in Berkeley and Los Altos. She often spent summers in Carmel with her family.

She was a graduate of Stanford University and an instructor at Stanford's School of Nursing. Through the late 1930s she worked as the refinery nurse for C&H Sugar in Crockett. In the early 1940s, she worked for the Berkeley chapter of the Red Cross, then joined her late husband, Hugh, a civilian, in post-World War II Germany.

From 1947 to 1953, she taught nursing and home care and headed major refugee relief programs sponsored by the German-American Women's Club in Frankfurt and Heidelberg. In 1956 she was assigned by the U.S. Army hospital in Munich to Operation Safe Haven, the program which brought refugees from the Hungarian revolt to the United States. She retired to Carmel in 1967, and for many years did volunteer work there in the Red Cross blood drives.

Survivors include two sons, Will of San Francisco, and Claxton of Astoria, Ore., and three grandchildren. Her husband died in 1972.

Plans for a memorial service in Carmel will be announced later.

William M. Gaston

A memorial service took place May 23 at the Church of the Wayfarer in Carmel, followed by the scattering of ashes at sea, for William M. Gaston, a former resident of the Monterey Peninsula, who died May 13 in a convalescent hospital in Sioux City, Iowa. He was 82.

Born July 29, 1904 in Erie, Kan., he graduated from Baker University in Baldwin, Kan. in 1926 and joined the B.F. Goodrich Co. in St. Louis. He worked in sales and management for the firm in Akron, Kansas City and New York City.

During World War II, after attending Princeton University, he was commissioned as a lieutenant commander in the U.S. Navy and served as commander of Waianai Naval Amphibious Training Base in the Hawaiian Islands. In 1959 he was named president of B.F. Goodrich Co. Brazil S.A. in Sao Paulo, Brazil.

He moved to Carmel in 1967, residing there and in Pebble Beach until the death of his wife, Sally, in 1983, when he moved to Sioux City.

He was a member of the Carmel Kiwanis Club, Monterey Elks Lodge, the Church of the Wayfarer and the Monterey Peninsula Country Club, and was active in civic and social organizations throughout the peninsula.

Survivors include a daughter, Joan Waitt of Sioux City; a son, Clifford of Monterey; and a stepson, Pryor Lorraine of Middleburg, Pa.; seven grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

The family suggests memorial contributions to the William M. Gaston Memorial Fund, care of the Boys and Girls Home, 2610 Douglas St., Sioux City, Iowa 51104.

Nicholas Biersteker

Rosary was recited May 17 at Paul Mortuary Chapel, and Memorial Mass was celebrated May 18 at the Presidio of Monterey Chapel, for retired Army Lt. Col. Nicholas C. Biersteker, a Pebble Beach resident since 1961, who died May 13 at Community Hospital. He was 74.

Born Sept. 2, 1912 in Little Chute, Wis., he served in the Army for 27 years. During World War II he served with the 757th Tank Battalion in North Africa and Italy.

The family suggests memorial contributions to the American Lung Association or to the American Heart Association.

Anne F. Spencer

Private services took place for Anne F. Spencer of Carmel, who died May 10 at Community Hospital. She was 58.

Born March 1, 1929 in New Haven, Conn., she came to Carmel two years ago. She had been in real estate sales for 10 years.

She was a graduate of Mt. Holyoke College in Holyoke, Mass., and was a member of the Church of Religious Science in Massachusetts and Carmel.

Survivors include two daughters, Sandra Lambert of Berkeley, and Virginia Fogg of Carmel; a son, David Lambert of Tahoe Vista; two brothers, John Fraser of Woodbridge, Conn., and Donald Fraser of New Haven, and two grandchildren.

CARMEL ROTARY CLUB, LA PLAYA HOTEL
May 26, 1983 The Carmel Pine Cone/CV Outlook

Oh Almighty and Eternal God, be pleased to bless this food to our use, and to bless us all to Thy service. Help us to see Thy truths clearly and to avoid self deception and double talk, especially to Thee.

Before and during World War I, I had a friend, Dr. Joap Wilderbeek of Eindhoven, North Brabant, in the Netherlands.

When he was at loss for a word he invented one, or he would call the word, "dingus." For example, if he wanted a teaspoon he would say, "hand me the dingus in the teetoffel."

Many of us use "sniglets" when we pray for fear we might make a serious committment to God's law of love to Him and of our neighbor. After all, isn't it easier to "spadoodle" than to "servapalado." This is not the new Rotary motto, but for many of us it might as well be. It is, I repeat, easier to "spadoodle" than to "servapalado." Amen.

Housing sought for Bach musicians

Housing donors for the Carmel Bach Festival have the opportunity to host one of the festival's many out-of-town musicians. Fifty members of the orchestra and 35 members of the chorale come to Carmel from around the country to perform in this renowned festival to which Carmel has played host for 50 years. This year musicians arrive July 1 to begin rehearsals and stay through Aug. 2.

Housing donations vary from offering a room and bath in a private home to offering an entire house of any size to house many musicians. Since musicians are busy with all-day rehearsals and evening performances, they are undemanding guests.

For further information, contact Nana Faridany at the Carmel Bach Festival office, 624-1521.

Nightingale follows his own success formula

By ANNE PAPINEAU

WHEN EARL Nightingale was a child growing up during the Depression in Long Beach, he already had two goals that would guide him for a lifetime.

"I wanted to become a professional writer because I was an omnivorous reader. My other goal was to find out what makes the difference between people who succeed and people who fail," he explains.

Today, at an age when many people are savoring their retirement, Nightingale is touring the country promoting his latest book, Earl Nightingale's Greatest Discovery: The Strangest Secret ... Revisited. In 1986 he was inducted into the Radio Hall of Fame. He maintains homes in Carmel Valley and in Paradise Valley, Ariz. And he is chairman of an audio publishing business.

Nightingale appears to have remained true to the goals he set for himself as a 12-year-old.

A veteran of the Golden Age of Radio, Nightingale is perhaps best-known for his internationally-syndicated radio program, "Our Changing World," in which he relates inspiring stories of perseverance and achievement.

His radio days go back to the 1940s. In the early '50s he was Sky King on a children's adventure show. Mike Wallace, better known today as a correspondent for "60 Minutes," did the peanut butter commercials during "Sky King."

But before success Nightingale experienced a childhood "at the wrong end of the Depression."

"I was deeply impressed by the Depression," he says, recalling his youth. "It was a sociological calamity I found extremely interesting. We were very poor. My mother had to support us three boys by herself. It was a tough job."

Nightingale entered the U.S. Marine Corps. In 1945, while serving as a Marine Corps instructor at Jacksonville, N.C., he found work at a local radio station. Nightingale appreciated the break.

"Radio is a very interesting and most rewarding medium," he notes. "It's the most ubiquitous."

He stuck with it. In 1949 he was hired by CBS in Chicago, and the following year he resigned to broadcast his own show from WGN.

"My program has always been about people and what they do and don't do — human development. I've been fascinated by human beings since I was a kid."

Nightingale became familiar to kids as the voice of Sky King from 1950 to 1954, when it was a network ratings leader.

The author of Earl Nightingale's Greatest Discovery said that he discovered the secret of success at age 29, when he was working for CBS.

"It's also the secret of failure," he says in a distinctively husky voice. "I discovered that in all the philosophies and religions I'd studied there was a unified thread that kept appearing again and again. The thread that kept appearing was simply that we become what we think about.

"I realized I could control my thinking, therefore I could control my future."

Nightingale continued to take steps to direct his future. In 1956 he wrote and recorded "The Strangest Secret." It became the first spoken-word record to sell more than a million copies. It is still available on both audiocassette and videocassette.

Instrumental in the audio publishing industry, Nightingale is chairman of the Chicago-based Nightingale-Conant Corp.

"We've found there are a lot of people who don't have time to read but have time to listen to a taped cassette," he explains. "They have time to listen while in the car, getting dressed, exercising. By putting material on cassettes we made it available to a missing culture that could develop the mind while coping with modern society."

In addition to his own titles, Nightingale's company also publishes audiocassettes by Jane Fonda, financial advisor Venita Van Caspel, cookie entrepreneur Wally "Famous" Amos and others.

"We cross the whole spectrum of human interest," he says.

Nightingale and his wife, Diana, spend summers at their home on the Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club. Both golf enthusiasts, they enjoy travelling and playing courses around the world.

In Carmel Valley, Nightingale keeps a library of books that are inspiring to him.

"My heroes are all lined up. One of my favorites is the poet, Robinson Jeffers. I love his poetry."

Having completed his latest book, Nightingale is touring the country promoting it. He admits that writing "is very hard work."

"I love to write after I've written. Putting one's posterior to the chair and sitting at the typewriter for hour after hour is a very difficult thing to do. But I have over 150 books on the English language alone. English is marvelous. It's got over 650,000 words."

'I realized I could control my thinking therefore I could control my future.'

Nightingale maintains that he would like to write another book — "maybe two or three."

He does indeed appear to be true to the credo he expresses in books and on cassette.

According to Nightingale, "If we have a clear-cut and interesting goal we want very much to reach and to which we are completely dedicated, we'll reach it."

EARL NIGHTINGALE, a part-time resident of Carmel Valley, has distinguished himself in the fields of publishing, radio and audio publishing. Inducted into the Radio Hall of Fame last year, he created the internationally-syndicated radio program, "Our Changing World."

Los Angeles choreographer joins Frohman Academy program

THE FROHMAN ACADEMY For Musical Theatre Education has hired L.A. based film/television choregrapher Mari Winsor as guest "artist-in-residence" for the school's fourth annual Summer Young People's Musical Theatre Camp.

Winsor recently appeared in Michael Jackson's new video Chicago Nights and has choregraphed videos for such stars as Huey Lewis and the News (Heart and Soul) and Eddie Money (Club Michele).

She choreographed Vanessa Williams in an episode of "Partners in Crime" and danced for Otis Sallid in the feature film Death Spa. She received the San Francisco Critics' Circle Award for her choreography of "Doo Wop" in 1982 and was seen in the hit Los Angeles production of A Night For Dancing.

Winsor will participate for two weeks in the academy's summer program. She will hold jazz dance classes for advanced Frohman students and choreograph a number that will be featured in the program's salute to the 1960s titled Good Vibrations. She has studied jazz dance with such teachers as Hinton Battle and ballet with Alonzo King and Barbara Cole.

"The Frohman Academy believes strongly in offering our students the experience of guest professional artists who work in the field," stated Mikel Pippi, executive director. "This gives them the benefit of these artist's training and allows the artist to pass on to a new generation a love for musical theater."

Other guest instructors in dance that have participated in Frohman Academy summer and in-school programs include Carlton Johnson (choreographer The Whiz), Larry Fuller (choreographer Evita and Time), Otis Sallid (choreographer for the film Girls Just Want to Have Fun) and Ethel Martin (Jack Cole protege and choreographer for the film A Funny Thing Happened On The Way To The Forum).

MARI WINSOR will join the Frohman Academy as guest "artist-in-residence" this summer.

The Academy's Young People's Musical Theatre Camp features daily training in all aspects of musical theater (acting, singing, instrumental music, dance, makeup, costuming and theater history). For information call Gloria Elber, program administrator at 625-9900.

Bach Festival banners unfurled early at Marjorie Evans Gallery

CARMEL BACH Festival banners from past years, researched, designed and created by Nancy Morrow and Melissa Lofton go on display Monday, June 1 through July 31, in the Marjorie Evans Gallery at the north end of Sunset Center in Carmel.

The pageantry of the memorial Bach Concerts in historic Carmel Mission has been enhanced by these banners since 1981.

Symbols of power, lions and eagles, appear on many of the banners, reflecting the owners' desires to proclaim their achievements. Like ancient totem poles, these banners express a profound human desire to partake of the power of the lion or the majesty of the eagle.

Each banner is based on an authentic coat of arms or heraldic design associated with the composers involved in the concerts. Each element of the designs has a history and represents an award, a marriage, an inheritance, a fortune made or a kingdom won.

Familiar designs appearing on many of the Bach banners are the running red lions of England, the rampant red lions of Scotland, the purple lion of the ancient Spanish Kingdom of Laon, the castles of Castile, the eagles of Germany and Rome, the crowns of Sweden, the triple crowns of the popes, the fleur de lis of France, the cross of Jerusalem and the Maltese Cross.

Less familiar are the red gryphen of Pomerania, the white eagle of Bohemia, the double headed Byzantine eagle, the pomegranate of Granada, the barred rampant lion of Bavaria and the surprising red and white checked eagle of Moravia, an an-

Turn-of-the-century Vienna is the setting for Tom Stoppard's satiric farce, On the Razzle. The comedic piece, which leans heavily on language games and mistaken identities, will be staged by the Carmel High School Players.

Diana Hardy directs On the Razzle. The farce focuses on two shop boys who seek a chance to escape to the city for a day's fun. Their employer has gone into the city to enjoy an engagement supper with his fiancee, Madame Knorr; and their employer's niece has seized the opportunity to elope with her fiance. Unfortunately each of the principals ends up at the same restaurant.

Curtain is at 7 p.m. Wednesday through Friday, June 3-5, in Room 2 at Carmel High School. Admission is $3 for adults, $2 for students.

THEATER REVIEW

By Joe Guzaitis

MPC stages 'Night of the Iguana'

TENNESSEE WILLIAMS' last really significant play is Night of the Iguana, a torrid psychosexual drama first produced in 1961 and made into a film in 1964 starring Richard Burton. Even in these jaded times, the play survives with much of its power intact. The topicality of a play about a defrocked minister in the light of the current PTL "Pearlygate" affair adds another dimension to this staging. Although T. Lawrence Shannon is no Jim Bakker, show business of a sort is one of their mutual interests: Bakker runs a religious theme park, Lawrence is a tour guide for Blake's Tours (still a leader and mentor when we meet him at the Costa Verde "Resort" in Puerto Barrio, Mexico.)

He has a troupe of 11 teachers from Baptist Female College of Blowing Rock, Texas in his bus. He has forced them to come to this resort run by a friend; he is accused of seducing the 16-year-old daughter of one teacher, and he has came to Costa Verde to collapse. "Why does he always come here to crack up?" asks Maxine, the manager.

In Shannon, Larry Welch has a vehicle that lets him use his awesome energy in a variety of ways. Between disputation, oratory, and exhortation he runs the gamut of his considerable skills. Some may prefer a more pensive, more modulated Shannon, but the author called for a "wild-eyed" character, a "black Irish" temperament. Welch conveys those qualities excellently.

Shannon has been defrocked because once before he was accused of seducing a young lady, as well as preaching heresy, and was locked out of his church. He is now being pursued by his earthy old friend Maxine, an "inconsolable" widow (of two weeks standing) and Hannah, a woman of dignity and grace (who could make something out of him if such things were possible.)

The body of the play deals with the war in his soul between his two alternatives. In the end, he substitutes himself symbolically for the iguana that was being fattened for the table. He lets it go at Hannah's request and then goes off with Maxine.

There are other nice touches like that throughout the play. For instance, when Shannon tries to put on his clerical collar, it won't stay because of a frayed buttonhole, reinforcing his fall from grace. His employer, "Blake's Tours," reminds us of the religious visionary William Blake and suggests the kind of tours Shannon may have tried to inflict on his charges.

The other key players are also very good. Nancy Kocher does such a superb rendering as Judith Fellowes, a sort of "bulwark of Blowing Rock," that it's hard for me to imagine a better way to play that role. In her battles with the Reverend, she attacks incessantly, gives no quarter, and brings about the necessary ruination of his career as a tour guide. Anyone who can make Larry Welch appear to cower on stage has done a formidable thing.

Monica Lavelle plays Hannah Jelkes, the "pushing 40" spinster who, as she shepherds her "97-years-young" father around, brings such a convincing sense of quiet dignity to her role that we can almost overlook the impossibility of a script that requires her to be pushing a nonagenarian around a tropical jungle in a wheelchair. Hannah is clearly who Shannon should be interested in in the best of all possible worlds. They become spiritually close for a moment, but no more.

Jonathan Coffin (Nonno), Hannah's grandfather, is the "oldest living practicing poet." He can no longer see to read or write, so he must memorize his poems as he creates them. He has vowed to finish his current poem before he dies. Harrison Shields plays the role with a purity of purpose that is admirable.

Who Shannon does get is the recently widowed Maxine Faulk, proprietess of the Costa Verde. Maxine is played with sassy cynicism by Dorian Ellis. Maxine circles the wounded Shannon, ready to pounce, as he loses all alternatives to settling down and becoming Maxine's star boarder.

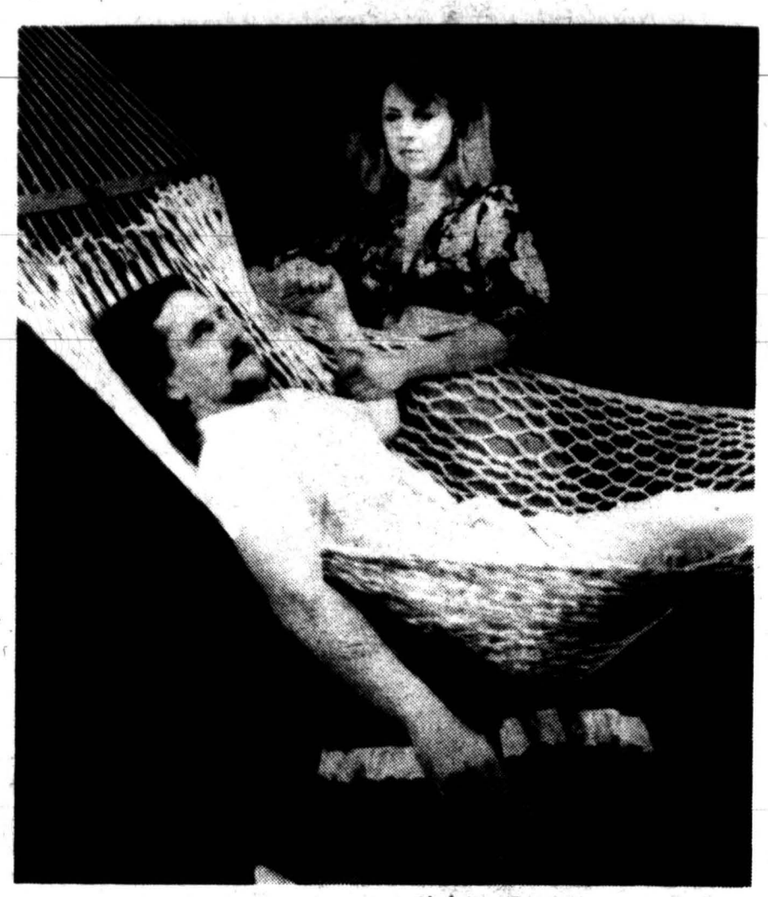
Bill Lindsay, who played Franz Joseph in MPC's Amadeus, had the cameo role of Jake Latta, the rival tour guide who has the task of relieving Shannon of his bus key and his Baptist females. Lindsay gives a good display of piranha behavior as Shannon's misfortune becomes his good fortune.

A Canadian family is also staying at the resort. They serve as a chorus of mainstream attitudes that comment quizzically at various points on the curious goings-on. It is interesting to note that in the original Broadway version of the play, the action takes place in 1940 during the Battle of Britain, and the author specified a German family — the Fahrenkopfs ("travel heads"). They are described as Nazis, arms manufacturers, and are parodied as fat burghers on holiday.

Constance Gamiere's costumes are very appropriate and here contain some excellent comic touches as in the provocative parody of a sexy outfit that the young vamp Charlotte wears and the tacky beach garb worn by the Canadians.

The set by D. Thomas Beck is impressive, spilling over the confines of the stage and thrusting us into the steaming Mexican jungle. The only drawback was in one of the special effects: the dripping rain in the rain barrel after the storm. This novel effect got so loud at one point it drowned out the dialogue.

Night of the Iguana plays Thursdays through Sundays in the Main Theater at Monterey Peninsula College nightly at 8. Exceptions are Sunday matinees at 2 p.m. and evening curtains at 7:30 p.m. The play ends June 6th.



Wasted life

THE REV. Shannon (Larry Welch) lies in a hammock suffering from a neurotic eccentricity and feverish exaltation of his wasted life, while Maxine (Dorian Ellis) calls her erotic pet to his duty in a scene from the Monterey Peninsula College production of Night of the Iguana.

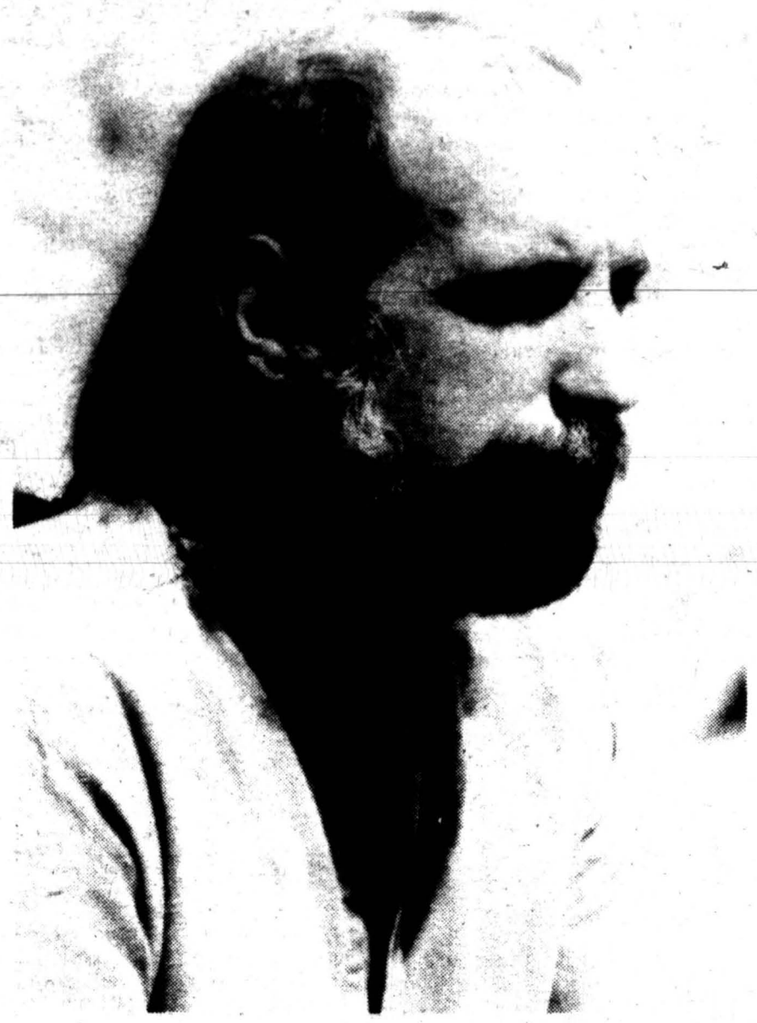
Vietnam veteran's poems summon memories



VIETNAM WAR veteran Billy Nick draws from his experiences in presenting a reading of his original poems. The one-man show will begin at 8 p.m. Tuesday, May 2 at the GroveMont Theater Arts Center in New Monterey. The evening will benefit local veterans' organizations.

Local poet Billy Nick will present a one-man show of his original works at 8 p.m. Tuesday, June 2 at the GroveMont Theater Arts Center, located at 320 Hoffman (between Lighthouse and Hawthorne) in New Monterey. The evening will benefit local veterans' organizations.

A veteran of the Vietnam War, Billy Nick draws on his past war-time experiences as a basis for his poetry. In 1982, Nick was struggling to overcome feelings of rage, grief and bitterness about the war that threatened to destroy him. One day, a therapist wrote down some notes during a session and handed them back to Nick.

"It looked like a poem," Nick said. "Those words back then were a way for me to survive, to heal and bring me up to today."

Today, Nick, 38, shares his poetry with his "brothers" by doing readings around the country. He has performed locally at Portofino's Cafe and the Marina Vietnam Vets Outreach Center. He appeared at the Santa Barbara Veteran's Center and several POW/MIA seminars in Los Angeles. Most recently, Nick presented his works at U.C. Davis as part of the university's program for Vietnam Veterans week. Following his engagement at GroveMont, Nick will perform on June 6 in San Diego at the POW/MIA Flagraising ceremony to focus attention on missing Americans still unaccounted for in Southeast Asia.

Nick also plans a tour to New York where he will explore the possibility of videotaping his live readings. He feels the true story of the Vietnam veteran has never been captured on film, not even the recent highly-acclaimed Platoon.

"The sheer magnificence of the Vietnam veteran community in this country is the story that's never been told," Nick said. "People have to learn to differentiate between the war and its warriors."

"The big mistake America and the American people made was to take their feelings about the war and make them synonymous with the warrior. That must never happen again."

Billy Nick will appear one night only, Tuesday, June 2. Ticket prices are $5. For reservations call the theater at 649-6852 or Center Stage Ticketing at 649-5561.

Lung association sponsors bicycle treks

Applications for the two 1987 Bike Treks are now available from the American Lung Association of Monterey, Santa Cruz and San Luis Obispo counties.

This is the sixth year of the local Lung Association's "Trek for Life and Breath" program. The purpose of the program is to encourage bicycling, promote health, and raise funds to support a range of programs targeted for the prevention and control of lung disease. These challenging events invariably attract curious, fun-loving adventurers. Beginners as well as experienced bicyclists are welcome!

The first trek, an eight-day "Big Sur and Beyond" Trek will take riders from Santa Cruz to Santa Barbara via Highway 1. The route covers approximately 300 miles of scenery and attractions.

The second of the two treks this year is a three-day "Bay Venture" Trek of the Monterey Bay. The route covers 125 miles of gentle terrain for the beginner or intermediate cyclist, and includes a group tour of the Monterey Bay Aquarium.

The Lung Association also provides all food, camping, leadership, vehicle support, maps, bicycle mechanic, and recreation - all your gear is carried for you! The participant provides his or her own equipment and raises pledges to help support Lung Association programs.

Space is limited, and participants should apply by Aug. 1. Participants should be at least 16 years of age.

Special orientation sessions will be held in July and August to acquaint potential participants with the Trek and Lung Association programs. Individuals requesting more information or applications should write to the American Lung Association at 140 Central Ave., Salinas, CA 93901, or call 757-5864.

DANCER AND choreographer Walter White will join his ensemble in performances Saturday and Sunday, May 29-30, at Santa Catalina School in Monterey. The dance ensemble includes, from left, Amy Sugar, Mollie O'Neal, Jane DeLay, Janet Morris and Deborah White. For ticket information, call 649-5561.

Walter White ensemble dances

"WALTER WHITE and Dancers" - an evening of movement magic - will play Saturday and Sunday, May 29 and 30, at the Sister Carlotta Performing Center at Santa Catalina School.

The concert is directed by White, and is his first production since "Walter White Very Alive" concert presented in 1985. Many peninsulans remember White's association with Joy Berta and his performance with The Tandy Beal Company and the Kat Knapp Jazz Company.

The concert features White, Amy Sugar, Janet Morrs, Mollie O'Neal, Jane DeLay, Paula Haro, Christine Cater, Conrad Selvig, and White's wife, Deborah Reynolds.

Once again, White will attempt to create contemporary and original dances in an entertaining way.

White explains, "I would like to think even those people who are not avid dance enthusiasts can be entertained. For that reason, I always incorporate comedy and some sense of fun to balance the more dramatic numbers in my productions."

Among the numbers for the evening will be "White Works," a contemporary movement piece, "Tapestrey of Delight," and the comedic "Summit Talk."

The program will begin at 8 p.m. Tickets are available at Center Stage Ticketing, 467 Alvarado St. Monterey, 649-5561. Admission is $7 general, $6 for senior citizens and students.

Toll-free number serves state's campers

A single toll-free number may now be used both to make State Park System reservations and to request reservation system information. The single number, from phones in Californa, is 1-800-446-7275 (1-800-I GO PARK), the same number that was previously used only to make reservations.

The toll number for both reservations and reservation information, which can be used anywhere in the United States, is (619) 452-1950.

People who phone the old toll-free reservation information number, 1-800-952-5580, will hear a recorded message referring them to the combination number — the number serviced by Mistix in San Diego.

General information calls about the State Park System, not relating to reservations, may be obtained by phoning the Department of Parks and Recreation Office of Public Relations in Sacramento, (916) 445-6477, Monday through Friday, except holidays, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Information on environmental camping, disabled veterans camping and steep ravine cabins will continue to be obtained by calling (916) 323-2988.

Persons who call the public relations number for such information will be referred to the correct number.

New yoga series starts at Sunset

SOME NEW features are being introduced in the evening yoga classes taught by Phyllis Haffner and Jim Weaver at Sunset Center, Carmel, when the summer series begin on Monday, June 1, and Thursday, June 4. The changes reflect increasing coordination of teaching methods with the Tri-Yoga System taught by Kali Rae in Santa Cruz. Classes meet in Room 17 (middle building on 10th Street) from 6:30 to 8 p.m.

The Thursday night class, designated level one, will focus on the sustained postures of Hatha yoga. Thus it will be especially welcoming to beginners, but will also be appropraite for intermediates who want to perfect body alignment and increase strength in particular postures, or who just want a second class period per week.

The level two Monday class will include "talking-through" the postures, but will feature the continuous movements of flowing yoga, to develop greater flexibility, strength, endurance, and energy.

Coordination of the breath with the movements and stilling of the mind will be emphasized in both classes. Introductory breathing practices will be taught in the Thursday class, and more advanced techniques of pranayama in the Monday class.

The cost of each series is six classes for $25. For information or reservations, call 375-2364.

Tri-Yoga System workshop set Saturday

"FITNESS IS Fun" is the theme of a new workshop on the Tri-Yoga System of Fitness and Health which will meet in Carpenter Hall at Sunset Center in Carmel on Saturday, May 30, from 2 to 4:30 p.m. The cost is $10.

For more information or advance registration, call the Kali Rae Yoga Academy, Santa Cruz, 429-9138.

Monterey museum exhibits Picasso prints, ceramics

PRINTS AND ceramics by Pablo Picasso and cast bronze weights by the Ashanti people can be viewed until June at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art.

A collection of prints made by Pablo Picasso during the 1920s and '30s will be shown through June 14. The collection focuses on the theme of the artist in the studio, the artist and model and the relationship between art and life, fantasy and reality.

During this 20-year period, Picasso was influenced by Freud and surrealist theories about dream, desire and the unconscious. Many of the etchings in the exhibit demonstrate Picasso's weaving together of classical and surrealistic styles.

Also included in the exhibit is a selection of ceramics, including plates, vases, bowls, jugs and plaques. Picasso had a gift for manipulating clay: exaggerating shapes, transforming bases into bodies, flat surfaces into energized arenas.

In the Coburn Gallery at the museum is a selection of cast bronze weights used by the Ashanti people of West Africa to measure gold dust. Represented in these tiny sculptures (most are less than two inches high) are domestic scenes of Ashanti life, implements and articles of clothing, as well as local flora and fauna.

The collection also includes gold dust scales, textiles and assorted artifacts from the Ashanti people. This exhibition will remain on view through June 21.

The Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art is located at 559 Pacific St. in Monterey. It is open 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 1 to 4 p.m. Sunday. Admission is free.

cient province of Bohemia, now part of Czechoslovakia.

Executed in brilliant satins and cloths of gold or silver, the banners were designed to be carried in the candlelight processions which begin and end each Bach Festival Mission Memorial Concert. Each banner contains light reflecting surfaces and details to catch the eye and brighten the dark beauty of the Mission.

Morrow, who has created a new set of banners for each year since 1981, searched in the College of Heralds in London, England, the Library of Congress and the library of the National Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C., the libraries of the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill, the Frank Di Bellis Library in San Francisco, and the libraries of the Monterey Peninsula to assemble the coats of arms, the shields and heraldic designs on which she and Melissa Lofton drew in creating the Bach banners.

Born in the Moravian Community in Winston-Salem, N.C., Morrow graduated in 1938 from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill where she read for honors in English and acted with the famed Carolina Playmakers under director Professor Koch and Sam Selden.

Since her arrival in Carmel she has served on the California Curriculum Commission as an appointee of the governor as well as on the California Committee for the writing of an Educational Framework for Humanities Education and on the national Committee for Unified Science and Mathematics Education in the Elementary School, a project financed by the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Her innovative painted lanterns illuminate several homes on the Monterey Peninsula. Her recent large project was the decoration of the Serra Ballroom of the Monterey Conference Center for the Brazilian Carnival, the first project of the Carmel Classic Arts Foundation of which she is a member of the board. She has worked in manuscript illumination, murals, costume design, wall hangings and curtains as well as fabric design for clothing.

Melissa Lofton is the daughter of distinguished Carmel artist Richard Lofton, who died in 1966. Morrow was the wife of Richard Lofton until his death and had studied painting with him. Dr. Dwight W. Morrow, Jr. to whom Mrs. Morrow was married in 1970, died in 1976.

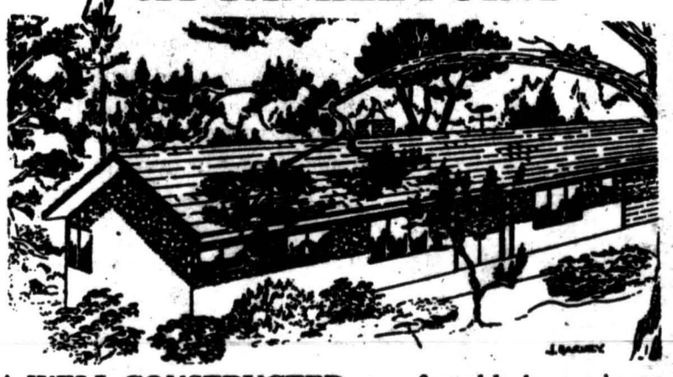
TRUE VALUE AT YANKEE POINT



A WELL CONSTRUCTED, comfortable house in an area of larger, more expensive homes is said to be "the way to go." If you like this approach to home-buying, you will want to see this new listing of ours right away. It has about 1400 square feet with three bedrooms and two baths on a lot of one-half acre of nicely landscaped garden. It's in move-in condition, it was built by a respected local contractor, it even has a peek of the ocean and it's priced at an affordable $239,500.

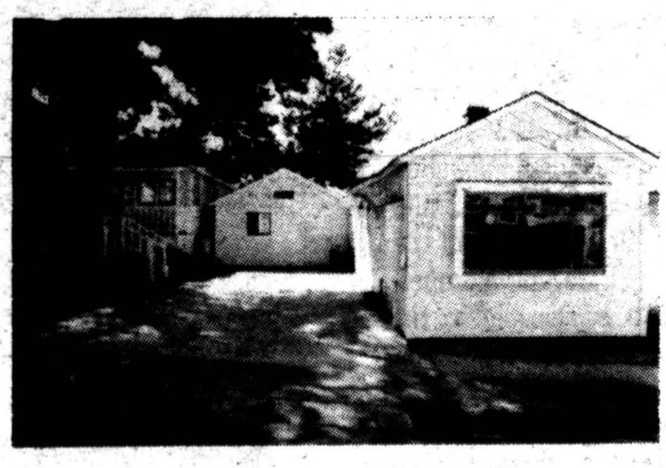
PEACE AND QUIET

IN CARMEL HIGHLANDS...an older home with three bedrooms on one acre, and with an ocean view over the treetops. There's also a comfortable guest house with tile floors, cast iron fireplace, and warm wood throughout. Another good buy at $280,000.

VACANT LOT

CLOSE TO TOWN and oversized at that. It's in a quiet neighborhood and there are Coastal-Commission-approved plans for a two bedroom, two bath home with an ocean view. $155,000.

TWO FOR THE PRICE OF ONE



TWO COTTAGES side by side in Pacific Grove, one just remodeled with new foundation, bath, copper pipes, and wiring, and the other with a newly painted exterior and great potential. Rent them both and enjoy a steady income stream, or rent one and keep one for your own use. Either way, you'll have a good investment in an attractive community. $179,000.

IN-LAWS

PLENTY of room in this three-bedroom home in New Monterey, with large living room, big family room, and separate dining room, plus glimpse of ocean. As a bonus, there's also a one bedroom in-law unit, also with peek of ocean, to the rear. A very good value at $179,000.

THE MITCHELL GROUP

The Big Sky

As you mount up Outlook Drive, swing right on Pine Hills, and continue to climb, your expectations begin to soar. And you will not be disappointed. Just as you round a tight curve near the top, there it is, a dramatic assembly of squares and angles high above the roadway.

The house is earth-colored, stucco on the upper stories, board and batten on ground level. The trim is black with a fine white line tracing the frames. The roof is heavy shingles.

A wide staircase brings you up to the entrance, a simple panneled door that opens to a high entrance hall with a modern chandelier and a great picture window looking south. The floor is foot-square Mexican tiles, a motif that continues up the stair to the right, past the living room, dining room and into the kitchen and family room. Tiles also provide low benches around the fireplaces in living and family rooms.

The kitchen and family area provides an expanse of 33 x 18, broken only by an island cooking center and a waist-high counter. Counter tops are pure white tile, punctuated here and there by Delft blue art tiles. The appliances, all in place, are top of the line.

A number of general comments apply to all rooms. All are finished in white plaster. All are lighted from small fixtures recessed in the ceilings. All plumbing fixtures — in the kitchen, the 8x8 laundry and 3 baths — are gold. All light switches are the silent, Mercury type.

The views from this aerie, framed by picture windows and glass doors, are incredible: Point Lobos (both sides) and the Carmel River to the south; green meadows, fairways and mountains slightly east; the Valley; and, of course, the Pacific.

All 4 bedrooms are large, ranging from 13 x 16 to 18 x14. The master suite is on the main level, with enormous vistas, a skylighted bath, and a wall of mirrors on the closet doors. The bath includes a scenic tub with Jacuzzi jets, glassed-in shower, 2 huge closets and lots of dressing space. A second bedroom and bath on this level is only slightly less grand.

There are 2 more bedrooms and a bath on the lower level, both with the mirrored wall and the limitless views. This is a genuinely beautiful house, finished with great care and taste, and in a marvelous setting at 25220 Pine Hills Drive. And inspiring as the views are, you will find yourself looking up at the great vault of the sky. Even Montana, The Big Sky Country, has nothing to match this!

It's new. It's 3300 sq. ft. It's $498,000.

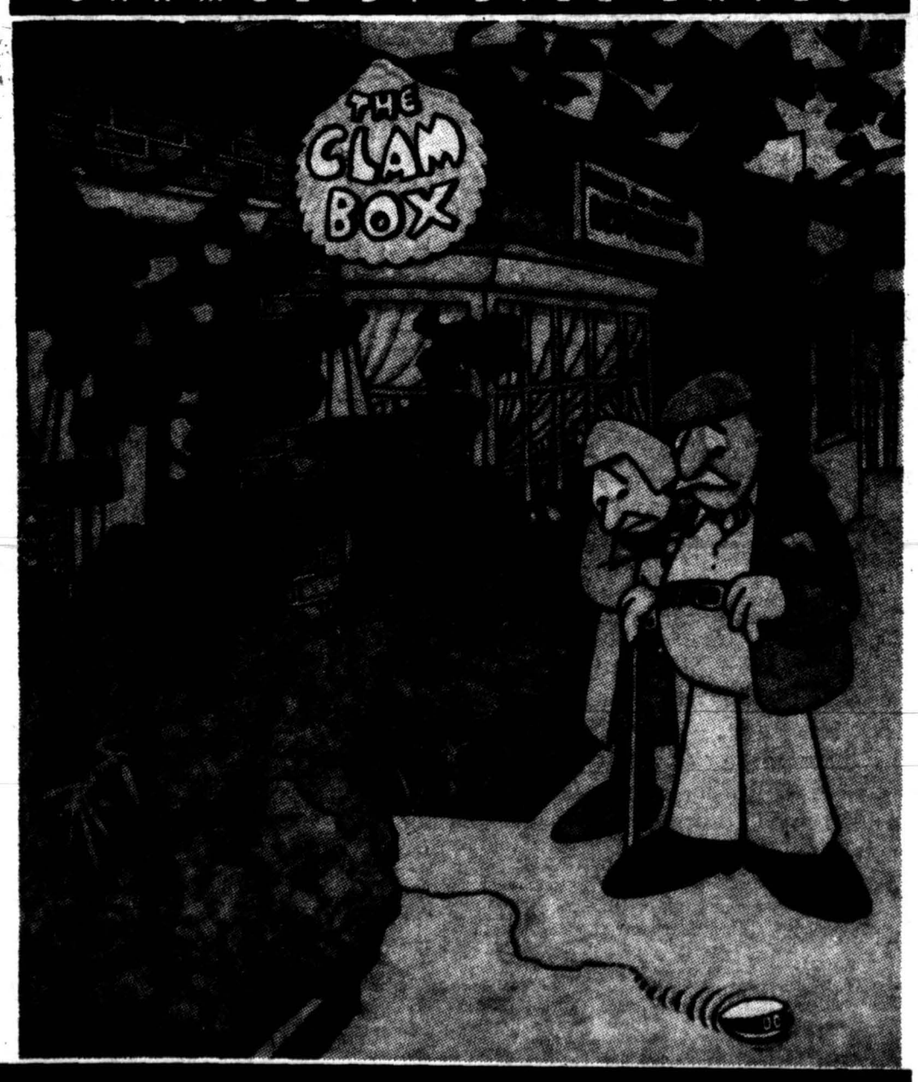
CARMEL BY BILL BATES



CARMEL LEGENDS

No. 18

Everybody knows that Del Monte is the oldest golf course west of the Mississippi, actually dating from 1897. But can you guess the second oldest in this area? Pebble Beach? Cypress Point? No, that honor belongs to the CARMEL GOLF CLUB, a nine hole links measuring 2112 yards, spread over the dunes of Carmel Point. Its club house stood on a rise at what is now 14th Ave. and San Antonio, and it is still there! It's a small, shingled building, now used as a guest house by descendants of the founders, Philip and Laura Wilson. The course was opened a hole at a time in 1912, and the first official meeting was held Nov. 20 of that year at the Pine Inn. Memberships were $20 a year, green fees 50¢ a day. The land was owned by the Carmel Development Company, which assured the Club by written contract that it "would not be sold in lots or otherwise till after the year 1915." Among the members was Dr. Clampett, which brings us up to date. The Club expired around 1920, and today nearly 300 houses stand on its abandoned fairways. Think what might have been!
